THE PITTSBURGH PIRATES' FIRST 100 YEARS

For everyone who rejoiced at Mazeroski's 1960 home run, for everyone who felt the heartbreak of Harvey Haddix's lost no-hitter, for everyone who witnessed the grace of Roberto Clemente in right field, for everyone who marvelled at Willie Stargell's awesome power, and for everyone who ever had the radio tuned to the Gunner on the back porch on a hot summer day—this book is for you.

The 1987 season marks the Pittsburgh Pirates' 100th anniversary as a member of the National League. Presenting a complete account of what has transpired on the diamond over the past 100 summers is a tall task indeed. After all, that covers a stretch of more than 15,000 games, five World Championships, and a list of magic moments too numerous to cover in a text of this size. Presenting a collection of Pirate highlights from years gone by is a more realistic goal. The idea was to jog the memories of Pirate fans young and old, enabling them to re-live some special moments during our Centennial Celebration.

IN THE BEGINNING

Although professional baseball in Pittsburgh actually has roots dating back to 1876, America's centennial year, it wasn't until 1887 that the Pittsbugh franchise gained acceptance into the prestigious National League. Pittsburgh, which had been playing in the rival American Association, secured its place in the league after club president W. A. Nimmick applied for a vacancy created when the Kansas City club was expelled. The application was accepted and the club, known then as the "Alleghenies," played its first National League game against Chicago at old Recreation Park in Pittsburgh on April 30, 1887.

An estimated crowd of between 9,000 and 10,000 showed up to see the Alleghenies battle the defending National League champions that day and they did not go home disappointed. Under the direction of Manager Horace Phillips, Pittsburgh jumped out to a 5-0 lead and went on to a record 6-2 victory in a game that lasted only an hour and 32 minutes. The final box read: Pittsburgh—six runs, 12 hits, no errors and Chicago—two runs, 10 hits, three errors. Righthander James "Pud" Galvin scattered 10 hits in a route-going performance and the offensive star of the game for Pittsburgh was first baseman Alexander McKinnon who collected four hits, including a double and a triple.

For those of you who never heard of either one of those guys: Galvin is a member of the baseball Hall of Fame who won 361 games over the course of his 14-year major league career, including 137 in a Pittsburgh uniform. He went on to compile a 28-21 record for the Alleghenies that season. He was a four-time 20-game winner with Pittsburgh. Meanwhile, McKinnon would go on to bat .340 in just 48 games for the Alleghenies and retire following the season. He played four years in the majors, but just the 1887 season with Pittsburgh. The Alleghenies finished the season with a 55-69 record, good enough for a sixth place finish in what was at the time, an eight-team league. Chicago rebounded to put together a 71-50 record, but ended up third behind Detroit and Philadelphia.

JACK CHESBRO's 28 victories for the Pirates in 1902 is still a single season club record. He also led the league that year with eight shutouts.

WILBUR COOPER won 202 games for Pittsburgh between 1912-1924, making him the winningest pitcher in Pirate history.

That game was the first of 15,146 that Pittsburgh would play in its first 100 years in the National League. The cumulative record complied during the first century is 7,823 wins and 7,323 losses which reflects a .517 all-time winning percentage.

The Pirates didn't become known as the "Pirates" until 1891 and the story involves a little-known second baseman named Lou Bierbauer. Baseball news today is all too often filled with information of contracts, salaries and arbitration, but it might surprise you to know that these items were also making headlines nearly 100 years ago. In 1890, a number of the Alleghenies' stars jumped to the Players Brotherhood League in a dispute over low salaries, as did many players from both the National League and the American Association. When the Players Brotherhood League was disbanded shortly thereafter, the players were ordered to return to their original teams as per an agreement made between the two other leagues. Bierbauer had been the property of the Philadelphia Athletics of the American Association, but through an oversight his name did not appear on their list and Pittsburgh signed him as a free agent. The folks at the American Association were outraged by Pittsburgh's "piratical" actions and the team became known as the Pirates shortly thereafter.

THE PIRATES BECOME A FORCE

Pittsburgh's fortunes began to take a turn for the better in January of 1900 when owner Barney Dreyfuss swung the biggest player transaction in the club's history. Dreyfuss formerly owned the Louisville franchise which was dropped by the National League following the 1899 season. He received permission from the league to buy into the Pittsburgh club and did so, becoming its president and principal owner. Dreyfuss brought 14 of his Louisville players to Pittsburgh, including Hall of Famers Fred Clarke, Honus Wagner, and Rube Waddell; and standouts such as Deacon Phillipe, Chief Zimmer, Claude Ritchey and Tommy Leach. All played significant roles in the Pirates' rise to power at the turn of the century.

The franchise failed to win a championship in its first 14 seasons, but captured three straight National League crowns from 1901-1903 with Clarke at the helm as player-manager. Clarke and Wagner were outfielders, Waddell and Phillippe were pitchers, Zimmer was a catcher, Ritchey was a second baseman, and Leach played third base. Wagner moved to shortstop during the 1901 season after Dreyfuss kicked the veteran starter at that position, Fred "Bones" Ely, off the team. Dreyfuss did so after finding out that Ely was trying to convince other Pirate players to jump to the new American League. Wagner, who was born in Carnegie, PA, went on to become one of the greatest hitters and shortstops the game has ever known.

After finishing second to Brooklyn in 1900, the Pirates won the National League pennant for the first time in 1901, compiling an impressive 90-49 record. Wagner led the team with a .353 batting average and he also led the league with 126 runs batted in. The Pirate line-up featured three other .300 hitters besides Wagner—centerfielder Ginger Beaumont (.332), Clarke (.324) and right-fielder Alfonso Davis (.313). On the pitching side, Phillippe and Jackie Chesbro led the way finishing 22-12 and 21-9 respectively.

As good as the Pirates were in 1901, they got better in 1902. Pittsburgh's 103-36 record enabled them to finish light years ahead of second-place Brooklyn which compiled a 75-63 mark. Beaumont led the league with a .357 batting average, Wagner led the league with 91 runs batted in and, believe it or not, Leach led the league with six home runs. Chesbro was the N.L.'s top winner with a 28-6 record and Phillippe (20-9) and Jesse Tannehill (20-6) were also 20-game winners.

Although Chesbro and Tannehill both jumped to the American League for the 1903 season, the Pirates nonetheless managed to repeat again with Phillippe and Sam Leever winning 25 games apiece. The record slipped a bit to 91-49, but it was good enough to easily outdistance John McGraw's New York Giants (84-55). Wagner batted .355 to win his second of eight batting titles and he led the club club with 101 RBI's. Clarke tied Cincinnati's Mike Donlin for second place in the batting race with a .351 average. The 1903 campaign ended differently for the Pirates, however. Dreyfuss is sometimes called "the father of the World Series" because he boldly challenged the American League Champion Boston Red Sox to a post-season playoff series. On October 1, 1903, Phillippe defeated Cy Young and the Red Sox, 7-3, in the first World Series game ever played. Boston went on to win the best-of-nine series five games to three with Young coming back to record two victories.

MORE CHAMPIONSHIP SEASONS

Clarke's Pirates would capture one more pennant before 1910, winning a club-record 110 games in 1909, the year Forbes Field opened. Their 110-42 record put them six and half games ahead of Chicago (104-49), interrupting a string of three straight pennants for Manager Frank Chance's club. The World Series that year pitted the Pirates against the Detroit Tigers, or more specifically Wagner against another one of the game's all-time greats, Ty Cobb. Both had captured their respective league's batting and RBI titles that year. Wagner won the N.L. crown with a .339 average while driving in 100 runs and Cobb was the A.L.'s top hitter with a .377 average, knocking in 115 runs. However, it was Wagner who won the showdown, batting .333 in the Series compared to Cobb's .231 as the Pirates took the championship four games to three. A rookie pitcher named Babe Adams used the 1909 World Series as a springboard to stardom. After winning only 12 games during the regular season, Adams was victorious three times in the World Series against the Tigers, including an 8-0 shutout in the seventh and deciding game. Adams went on to become one of the Pirates' all-time great pitchers, winning 194 games in 18 years with the club.

It was 1925 before Pittsburgh claimed another World Series trophy and by that time, the names and faces had changed. The 1925 club was piloted by Bill McKechnie, and outfielders Kiki Cuyler and Max Carey, and third baseman Pie Traynor had replaced Wagner and Clarke as the team's big stars. The team was loaded with hitters as only one member of the starting lineup hit below .300 and that was second baseman Eddie Moore who was not exactly an embarrassment at .298. The Pirates fell behind Washington three games to one in the World Series before taking control. In the seventh and deciding game, Pittsburgh fell behind 4-0 in the first inning. However, the Pirates battled back and eventually won the game on a bases loaded double by Cuyler in the bottom of the eighth inning. Pittsburgh pounded out 15 hits that day to tag the loss on Hall of Famer Walter Johnson.

Pittsburgh returned to the World Series in 1927 under new manager Donie Bush, but unfortunately they had to face the New York Yankees. Many baseball experts agree that the Yankees of 1927 were perhaps "the" finest team of all-time. Featuring Babe Ruth and Lou Gehrig, the Yankees swept Pittsburgh four straight by scores of 5-4, 6-2, 8-1 and 4-3. That was Ruth's 60-home run season and it was also a year in which Gehrig drove in an unbelieveable 175 runs. Almost lost in the shuffle was the fact that Paul Waner won the N.L. batting title with a .380 average, his brother Lloyd Waner was third at .355, and Traynor was fifth at .342. Carmen Hill was the club's big winner with a 22-11 record as the Pirates beat out St. Louis by just a game and a half for the pennant.

CHAMPIONSHIPS IN THE MODERN ERA

By now every Pirate fan has heard the story of Bill Mazeroski's electrifying 1960 World Series home run many times over. Presumably, you would be hard pressed to find a baseball fan anywhere who is not aware of what transpired at precisely 3:36 PM on Thursday, October 13, 1960 at Forbes Field. At that moment, Mazeroski knocked a pitch from Yankee Ralph Terry over the left field wall to break a 9-9 deadlock in the bottom of the ninth inning in the seventh and deciding game. The blow brought the Pirates their first World Championship in 35 years.

Lost in the excitement of Maz' memorable blast was a three-run homer by Hal Smith in the bottom of the eighth inning which gave Pittsburgh a 9-7 lead at the time. It was Smith, a reserve catcher, who made Mazeroski's heroics possible.

Vernon Law was a 20-game winner for the Pirates that year (20-9) and he and Harvey Haddix each won two games in the World Series. Law won Game One (6-4) and Game Four (3-2) while Haddix won Game Five (5-2) and Game Seven. The Yankees dominated the three games they won by scores of 16-3, 10-0 and 12-0 as Mickey Mantle, Roger Maris, Yogi Berra, Elston Howard and Co. flexed their muscles regularly.

The 1960 Pirates, managed by Danny Murtaugh, were indeed a club to remember. Eight members of the squad were named to the National League All-Star team, the most ever for the Pirates. Mazeroski was the starting second baseman and catcher Smoky Burgess, outfielders Roberto Clemente and Bob Skinner, shortstop Dick Groat, and pitcher Elroy Face, Bob Friend and Law were also on the team. Groat was named the National League MVP that year after leading the league with a .325 batting average. Clemente was third in the league in batting (.314) behind Groat and San Francisco's Willie Mays (.319).

VERNON LAW'S 20-9 record helped the Pirates' reach the 1960 World Series.

The Pittsburgh Pirates were as dominant a team as there was in baseball during the decade of the 1970's. Pittsburgh captured six National League Eastern Division titles and two World Championships during that period and compiled an overall record of 916-695 (.569 winning percentage). The Pirates were the only National League team to finish no lower than third place during the 1970's and they only did that once (1973). The decade began with names such as Clemente, Willie Stargell, Bob Robertson, Manny Sanguillen, Matty Alou, Richie Hebner, Dock Ellis, Steve Blass and Dave Giusti on centerstage. By the time the 1970's came to a close, the cast of characters had changed to Stargell, Phil Garner, Bill Madlock, Dave Parker, Omar Moreno, Tim Foli, John Candelaria, Bert Blyleven and Kent Tekulve.

The World Championships came in 1971 and 1979 with Clemente and Stargell, two of the club's all-time greats, enjoying their finest moments. The 1971 club finished 97-65 during the regular season under Murtaugh, thanks in part to Stargell's league-leading 48 home runs. In the playoffs, the Pirates disposed of a San Francisco team that included Willie Mays, Willie McCovey, Bobby Bonds and Juan Marichal; three games to one. Manager Earl Weaver's Baltimore Orioles provided the opposition in the World Series. The Orioles boasted four 20-game winners that year in Dave McNally (21-5), Pat Dobson (20-8), Mike Cuellar and Jim Palmer (both 20-9). Sluggers Boog Powell, Frank Robinson, Brooks Robinson and Davey Johnson made Baltimore a formidable unit on offense.

After dropping the first two games of the Series by scores of 5-3 and 11-3, the Pirates found the victory column behind the three-hit pitching of Blass, winning Game Three, 5-1. Pittsburgh evened things at two games apiece by winning the first night game in World Series history, 4-3, with the benefit of some gutsy long relief by rookie Bruce Kison. The Pirates grabbed a three games to two advantage when Nelson Briles allowed just two singles and blanked the Orioles, 4-0 in Game Five. The Series moved back to Baltimore for Game Six where the Orioles won a hotly-contested 3-2 decision with Frank Robinson scoring on a sacrifice fly in the bottom of the ninth. That set up the climactic seventh game in which Clemente and Blass would play key roles. Blass went the distance, tossing a sparkling four-hitter for his second victory of the Series. Clemente, who banged out 12 hits in the seven games and batted .414, hit a solo homer off Cuellar in the fourth inning to give Pittsburgh a 1-0 lead. The Pirates added a run in the top of the eighth when Jose Pagan's double scored Stargell from first base. Baltimore scratched for a run in the bottom of the eighth to make the score 2-1 and the game ended that way as Blass retired the side in order in the ninth.

Under the direction of Manager Chuck Tanner, the 1979 Pirates took the N.L. East crown with a 98-64 record, edging Dick Williams' Montreal Expos who finished 95-65. Pittsburgh made short work of the Cincinnati Reds in the playoffs, sweeping John McNamara's club three straight games. The Pirates again landed opposite Weaver and the Baltimore Orioles in the World Series and again the results were the same as Pittsburgh was triumphant, four games to three. Pittsburgh trailed three games to one, but staved off elimination by coasting to a 7-1 win in Game Five behind the pitching of Jim Rooker and Blyleven. Madlock pounded out four hits in the contest and Foli drove in three big runs. Candelaria and Tekulve combined to blank Baltimore 4-0 in Game Six to even the Series at three games apiece. In the decisive seventh game, it was Stargell's two-run homer in the sixth that enabled the Pirates to overcome an early 1-0 deficit and go on to win 4-1. Stargell was the Series MVP as he collected 12 hits (three homers) and batted .400.

MORE GREAT PLAYERS, GREAT MOMENTS

Significant events, accomplishments and individuals in Pirate history were certainly not limited to championship years. There was slugger Ralph Kiner's seven consecutive home run titles in the late 1940's and early 1950's. There was a magic moment on May 29, 1956 when Pittsburgh first baseman Dale Long homered off Carl Erskine of the Dodgers. It was the eighth consecutive game in which Long had homered, setting a major league record that still stands today. Long kept the streak alive by homering off Ben Flowers of Philadelphia in the ninth inning of the seventh game.

There was also Harvey Haddix's 12-inning perfect game in Milwaukee on May 26, 1959, a performance many baseball people refer to as perhaps the greatest pitching effort of all-time. Haddix, of course, tragically lost his no-hitter and the game when he surrendered a home run to Joe Adcock of the Braves in the unlucky 13th inning. Nicholas Maddox (1907), Clifford Chambers (1951), Bob Moose (1969), Dock Ellis (1970) and John Candelaria (1976) did manage to hurl no-hitters while wearing Pirate uniforms, although none of their performances were as well chronicled.

It was also during the 1959 season that pitcher Elroy Face notched an incredible 18 consecutive victories out of the Pirate bullpen to finish 18-1 with 10 saves. Second baseman Rennie Stennett also had a moment when the eyes of the baseball world focused upon him. It was on September 16, 1975 at Chicago's Wrigley Field that Stennett tied a major league record by going 7-for-7. Among his seven hits were four singles, two doubles and one triple. Stennett scored five times in the Pirates' 22-0 triumph that day.

Significant individuals in Pirate history also include non-uniform personnel such as longtime owners John and Daniel Galbreath, general manager Joe L. Brown (1956-76) and broadcasters Rosey Rowswell and "The Gunner," Bob Prince. The Galbreath family began its association with the Pirates in 1946 when John teamed with Tom Johnson, Frank McKinney and entertainer Bing Crosby to purchase the club from the Benswanger family. The Galbreaths were involved with the Pirates until the team was sold to a group of 13 private and public investors in October of 1985. Brown was responsible for bringing together the talent that made the Pirates one of baseball's dominant teams in the 1970's. Pittsburgh's farm system flourished under Brown, producing such stars as Richie Hebner, Steve Blass, Manny Sanguillen, Al Oliver, Bob Robertson, Dave Cash, and Richie Zisk. Rowswell and Prince recreated as many memories for Pirate fans over the airwaves as they witnessed in person.

A CENTURY OF PIRATE UNIFORMS

Written and Illustrated by Marc Okkonen

The common visual symbol that distinguishes one baseball team from another and one era from another is the uniform. When you are truly a devoted partisan, the sight of anyone wearing the uniform of your preference draws immediate acceptance and admiration. Accordingly, the following survey of past Pirate uniforms will recall what the "good guys" wore when they faced the "bad guys" during the past 100 summers.

FROM THE GASLIGHT ERA TO GLORY

The Pittsburgh uniforms, in the first years as a member of the National League, were plain and devoid of embellishments or graphics to identify their home city. Only the color of their stockings and caps could set them apart from other teams in the league. The whole ensemble was standard for the day—long sleeved shirt with a regular collar, laced front, a very wide belt and high-top shoes. By the mid-1890's, the city name "Pittsburgh" was displayed across the shirt front in arched block capital letters, a common standard for most teams. The cap front also displayed a small white "P". Quilted trousers were the "in" feature of uniforms in the 1890's.

When the Louisville franchise dropped out of the league in 1899, Pittsburgh had the good fortune of signing many of its star players. Among these were future greats Honus Wagner, Fred Clarke, Tommy Leach and Deacon Phillipe, who led the Pirates to consecutive National League pennants in 1901-02-03. The Pittsburgh uniform of this era was awed much as the Yankee uniform of later decades. The Pirates wore dark blue stockings with red stripes. The jersey was short-sleeved with no trim except for a dark blue collar. The basic blue cap with a "P" was retained from the 1890's. The road uniform was simply a gray duplication of the home whites.

THE FORBES FIELD SAGA BEGINS

The Pittsburgh uniform changed very little during the years following 1903, except for the fact that an ornate capital "P" was added to the left front shirt pocket and the caps occasionally had white or gray crowns. The uniforms were still pretty much a carry-over from earlier in the decade, but with a new monogram added to the left sleeve. It was the "PBC" monogram signifying Pittsburgh Baseball Club.

The years between 1910-1915 introduced many new innovations in uniform design as Pittsburgh abandoned the tradition to follow trends. The regular collar was replaced by the short, stand-up "cadet" style. Pin-striped fabrics were now in vogue as the new collar and a button lapel became the focal point of the jersey design. Team nicknames were becoming officially accepted and Pittsburgh joined this movement by displaying "Pirates" in vertical capital letters down the button lapel. The cadet style collar soon gave way to a tapered collar extension, but the button lapel remained solid dark blue with white buttons and a "P-P" straddling the button. The latter half of the decade saw the solid blue lapel replaced by an outline trim in piping of various widths. During this period, the cap design included a "P" of white, red or a combination of the two colors. The capital "P" on the left breast periodically appeared in various styles and sizes throughout the decade.

THE ROARING TWENTIES AND THE WANER ERA

Baseball uniforms of the 1920's, perhaps because of the uncertainties following World War I, were by and large somber and conservative. The Pirate uniforms of this decade exemplified this retreat to austerity. Standard whites at home, standard grays on the road, simple graphics and solid colors were the rule. The 1925 and 1927 championship teams had the standard capital "P" on both sleeves.

If the prosperous era of the twenties reflected drabness in uniforms, the hard times of the thirties gave birth to a virtual explosion of added colors, trim features and graphic innovations. About 1933 the Pittsburgh uniform brightened up considerably. The team name "Pirates" was placed across the chest of the jersey in an arc of fancy red and blue capital letters. Solid blue belt tunnels and loops were included and piping trim incorporated both blue and red and was often double-striped. A wide, bold red stripe dressed up the stockings and the "P" on the blue cap was also red. The new trend of script lettering with underline flourish was introduced in 1937. By 1939, a zipper front replaced the buttons, following the lead of many other major league teams.

THE WAR YEARS AND BEYOND

Continuing the cycle of ever-changing graphics from the last decade, 1940 and 1941 saw the introduction of the most innovative feature on the Pirate uniforms to date. In place of the "P" or "Pirates", a colorful emblem depicting the head of a typical buccaneer in the appropriate headdress, earring and bandana was displayed on the left breast of both the home and away jerseys. This pirate emblem was the only graphic representation of the team nickname on a game jersey in the team's history and it also provided inspiration for the current centennial logo.

For the World War II years, "Pirates" and "Pittsburgh" were restored to both the home and road jerseys. Although fairly colorful, this seemed to signal another trend back to the more conventional uniform design. A new era of team color was reflected in the total re-design of the uniforms for 1948. Black and gold replaced blue and red forever and the clean, simple design of the home whites and road grays represented a full swing back to the traditional. The only decorative aspects of the new design were the gold trimming and the fact that the lettering style was at least moderately ornate. One interesting innovation in uniform caps did occur in the mid-fifties with the Pirates. A fiberglass cap was used for regular game duty, not just as a batting helmet. Apparently it was not practical as a full-time playing cap and it was discarded after a couple years.

OUT OF THE DEPTHS

By 1957, the team's fortunes were on the upswing and another experiment was introduced in the Pirate uniforms, sleeveless jerseys. The Cincinnati Reds had begun the idea the summer before and apparently impressed Pirate management enough to follow suit. The basic graphics and color scheme were not changed and the club stayed with this design throughout the decade of the sixties. The only noteworthy modification was the introduction of numbers in 1962.

THREE RIVERS AND DOUBLE-KNITS

When the time came to inaugurate Three Rivers Stadium during the 1970 season, it was also time for a change in uniforms. Just as the new structure represented the march of progress, the newest trend in uniforms was double-knit fabric which was lighter, more durable and more comfortable than the traditional flannels. The Pirates were the first major league club to adopt them. The color scheme of black and gold was retained and so was the basic lettering style of "Pirates." The jersey was a pullover with no more buttons or zippers and the built-in sash belt. The piping and socks stripes were replaced by yellow, black and white bands. The cap crown was yellow with a black bill. Within two years nearly every other major league team was wearing double-knits.

To commemorate the 1976 bicentennial, many clubs decided to wear the old striped, "pill box" style—a reminder of earlier days in baseball history. The Pirates participated and elected to retain this style for future years, creating a unique indentity for the club. By the late seventies, the Pirates introduced several color schemes in various combinations. Using sets of both shirts and pants in either white, gold or black and mixing them indiscriminately, no one could predict which ensemble the team would wear one day to the next. The Pirate equipment manager deserved special commendation for being able to manage the sometimes dizzying mixture of color coordinates. By 1985, the basic white and gray formula returned, signalling another return to the more traditional style uniform. The final stroke was the abandonment of the striped cap in favor of the standard black round crown type for the 1987 season.

DOUBLE BY CUYLER IN EIGHTH BRINGS TITLE TO PIRATES

Seventh and Deciding Battle of Big Series Is Finished in Drizzling Rain and Last Few Innings Are Played In Semi-Darkness

PACE TOO HARD FOR JOHNSON; MAX CAREY MAKES FOUR HITS

By EDWARD F. BALINGER

Baseball's big show is ended and it wound up with a drive that crowned our Bucs world's champions of 1925. McKechnie's gallant tribesmen galloped through the sea of mud and brought the Senators to earth with one decisive thud; they rallied bravely in the eighth and bunched three two-base blows, but Kiki Cuyler's timely smack upon the apple's nose, knocked in the runs that made the mighty throng stand up and scream and turned the boast of Washington into an empty dream. The foemen were outbatted by the Corsairs' great combine. The visitors made seven runs while Pittsburgh counted nine.

Sir Walter Johnson had one hand upon the bag of gold when suddenly the Pirates wrenched away his powerful hold and with one wild and mighty sweep the grand old hurling ace was forced to see the Buccaneers decide the series race. Then two-and forty thousand fans began to celebrate. They jumped for joy and flapped their wings—the hour was growing late. But no one seemed to care for that; the world seemed all aglow; they lingered in the rain as if they had no place to go. Their dinners awaited them at home; they did not care to eat; that glorious victory to them was rich and rare and sweet.

ALDRIDGE IS WILD

Vic Aldridge started out to pitch, but he had done his bit by winning twice before and now he really wasn't fit, for in the early chapter his effective hurling wing began to miss the platter; it was hard for him to fling. He did his best, but failed to keep four runs

Pie Traynor, third baseman, in 1925.

Pie Simply 'The Best'

Pie Traynor of the Pirates, who died yesterday, was regarded as the greatest third baseman of all time.

The late John J. McGraw, tempestuous manager of the New York Giants, referred to Traynor simply as "the best."

"I've never seen anything like him. I'll bet he ruined more base hits for my club than any other two infielders in the game.

"I wish I knew how many times one of my boys hit a sure two-base hit down the third-base line—sure, that is, with anybody else but him out there. He could come up with the ball and throw a runner out before he had a chance to drop his bat and start running."

Many observers rated Traynor as the finest fielding third

BALTIMORE — The Pirates are winners, World Series champions in one of the guttiest performances in sports history.

But more important than that, they are The Family.

After a tense 4-1 victory over the Baltimore Orioles that made them the fourth team to return from a 3-1 deficit to win the Series, the Pirates had a "Family" celebration last night.

Wives were in the clubhouse, kissing their husbands. Grown men were hugging other grown men. A little champagne was dumped on heads, but most of it was sipped in calm toasts to the warm, close friends at the nearby lockers.

And at the head of The Family was Willie Stargell, affectionately called "Pops" by his teammates. It was Stargell who first started playing the disco song "We Are Family," setting the tone for the Pirate clubhouse.

Gov. Luis A. Ferre officially declared the Pittsburgh Pirates' All-Star outfielder dead and ordered three days of mourning because of "the death of the great Puerto Rican, Roberto Clemente."

Ferre said he issued the special proclamation because "Clemente's premature death took place while on a noble mission of charity and neighborly love."

Clemente, 38, had agreed to head Puerto Rico's earthquake relief operation when he got word of the Dec. 23. His relief said he told her, "if there is one more delay, we'll leave this for tomorrow."

Colon said Clemente had insisted on going with the flight to make certain that the supplies got into the hands of the people who needed them.

"He had received reports that some of the food and clothing he had sent earlier had fallen into the hands of profiteers," said Colon.

Roberto Gets 3,000th, Will Rest Till Playoffs

By BOB SMIZIK

The man had learned his baseball under the searing sun of Puerto Rico. Many of his greatest days and many of his frequent rushes towards batting titles were made in the blazing heat of July and August.

It was, therefore, ironic that Roberto Clemente should answer immortality's call on a cool September afternoon. Answer it in a game he didn't want to play, but knew he had to.

At 3:07 p. m. yesterday, Roberto Clemente rammed a Jon Matlack curve ball into the gap in left-center field for a fourth inning double and his 3000th hit as he became the 11th man in baseball history to get 3,000 hits.

Fittingly, it was the leadoff hit in an inning that produced three Pirate runs and led the way to an eventual 5-0 win over the New York Mets at Three Rivers Stadium.

It may have been Clemente's last swing of the season. He was pinch hit for by Bill ...ski in the fifth inning. Afterwards, ... he would not play again until ... Saturday.

wonderful. And to the people back home in Puerto Rico, but especially to the fellow who pushed me to play baseball, Roberto Marin, he made me play. He carried me around looking for the man to sign me."

A noted insomniac, Clemente slept not at all Friday night. "My wife and I didn't get through talking on the phone to people until 4:30 in the mo.ning," he said. "So I decided it would be better not to go to bed at all.

"I knew I had to get the hit today because I couldn't afford to go through that another night."

Clemente was a tired and not particularly motivated man when he faced Matlack, a prime candidate for rookie-of-the-year honors.

"What made it so hard for me was that we already clinched the title," he said. "I hate to play exhibition games and these games to me are exhibitions. I can't get all keyed up for them."

Clemente was undecided whether to use

TRIBUTE TO PIRATE HALL OF FAMERS

Of the more than 150 former major league players who are enshrined in the National Baseball Hall of Fame in Cooperstown, NY, 10 of them made their mark on the game as membes of the Pittsburgh Pirates. Among them are World Series heroes such as shortstop Honus Wagner (1909), and outfielders Kiki Cuyler (1925) and Roberto Clemente (1971). Others include outfielders Fred Clarke, Max Carey, Paul Waner, Lloyd Waner, and Ralph Kiner, third baseman Pie Traynor and shortstop Arky Vaughn.

Collectively they won 16 batting titles, 16 stolen base titles, seven RBI titles, and seven home run crowns in addition to leading the Pirates to four of their five World Championships. Kiner won all seven of the home runs titles while Wagner (eight) and Clemente (four) were the leaders in batting championships. Clarke is a unique member of the group because he earned his place in the Hall of Fame as both a player and a manager. He was the Pirates' player-manager from 1900-1915 and besides being a .315 lifetime hitter, he won more games (1,422-969, .595) than any manager in the club's history.

Bill McKechnie, who managed the Pirates to a 409-293 record (.583) in five years (1922-1926) before moving on to stints with St. Louis and Cincinnati, is also a member of the Hall of Fame. Pittsburgh defeated Washington in the 1925 World Series under McKechnie's direction. Famed baseball pioneer and executive Branch Rickey, who served as general manager of the Pirates from 1951-1956, is another member of the Hall of Fame.

Other Hall of Famers who spent at least part of their careers with Pittsburgh include: Jake Beckley, Jack Chesbro, Joe Cronin, Frankie Frisch, James "Pud" Galvin, Hank Greenberg, Burleigh Grimes, Billy Herman, Waite Hoyt, Joseph Kelley, George Kelly, Chuck Klein, Fred Lindstrom, Al Lopez, Connie Mack, Heinie Manush, Rabbit Maranville, Casey Stengel, Arthur "Dazzy" Vance and Rube Waddell.

"100 SEASONS"

Let's take a look back at some mortal men
And recall a few names and some dates.
We'll throw in some pictures, some hot dogs,
and beer
And slowly return through the gates.

In 1887 Pittsburgh was growing,
And fielded its first N.L. team.
That opening day our boys played The Cubs,
This town was now a sportin' man's dream!

"The Pirates" were born, and Fred Clarke got them rolling,
A tough group they happened to be.
There was Wagner and Leach,
there was Kitty Bransfield,
And three pennants flew here by '03.

By '09 guys like Gibson, Camnitz and Leever
Brought the city its first Series crown.
"The World's Greatest Ballyard" was brand new Forbes Field,
The team was the hottest ticket in town.

The '25 Pirates, their dugout was loaded!
The team raised the league's pennant high.
Cuyler and Barnhart, Max Carey
and Traynor
Were champs—left the Senators dry.

The '30's and '40's, they dragged slowly past
Rocked hard by depression and war.
Rosey Rosewell's broadcasts were one way we knew,
To escape from the wolf at the door.

Rootin' for the home team both here and abroad,
Was he partial? Yeah, you might say...some.
Pullin' for Arky, Rip, Greenberg and Kiner,
"Open the window Aunt Minnie, here she comes!"

The '50's were on us and Rosey passed on.
"The Gunner" strapped on the mike with some spirit.
The suburbs were growing, the Pirates exploding
To the cellar...yet we still loved to hear it.

The '52 Bucs were "Rickey's Rinky Dinks,"
The worst team here-to-fore in the game.
Garagiola, Bartirome, DelGreco, Gus Bell,
To list a few, just to call them by name.

Five years in the cellar—and three next to last,
No hit, field, nor speed were their woes.
Yet the fans flocked in droves
to see Ralph Kiner hit,
Stamping feet, yelling, "look, there she goes!"

Alas and alack, it all came to an end,
After colorful Bragan did yield.
He got fired one night in a rhubarb and fight,
Sipping orange drink down on the field.

Then from seated behind those poles
at old Forbes,
First came hope, then came passion,
then a winner.
'Cause Murtaugh took over and fielded a team
With Nelson, "Ducky" Schofield and Skinner.

The 1960 Bucs, a most wonderous team,
From the coaches, to captain and crew.
They were close, they were smart and they sure were fast,
They could hit, how that old spheroid flew!

Virdon, "The Quail," would lead off the game,
He would single off somebody's mitt.
Then Groat looked down the line
for Oceak's sign,
Hit and run, or was it...run and hit?

"Arriba," Clemente would glide to the plate,
A rope shot he'd hit high off the wall.
Then Stuart or Nelson would flex their big arms,
And the cover they'd knock off the ball.

Hoak would hit a "high-hopper," a close call at first,
With the ump there was always a fight.
Then Skinner "The Dog," or Gino Cimoli
Would "tweener" a single to right.

"100 SEASONS"

Smokey Burgess or Hal Smith next would stand in,
Scorin' big with "Shake, Rattle and Roll."
Mazeroski would do whatever it took,
A bloop…or a blast was his goal.

A "Kitten" named Haddix was a pitcher that hit,
Oft times so could "Warrior" Friend.
"Vinegar" Bend was a hummer,
but the best with the bat,
Was Vern Law, the old "Deacon," AMEN.

That great team had great depth from the bench to bullpen,
They gave their all every day, every play.
Before the game started, we knew they would win
'Cause in '60, "we had 'em all the way!"

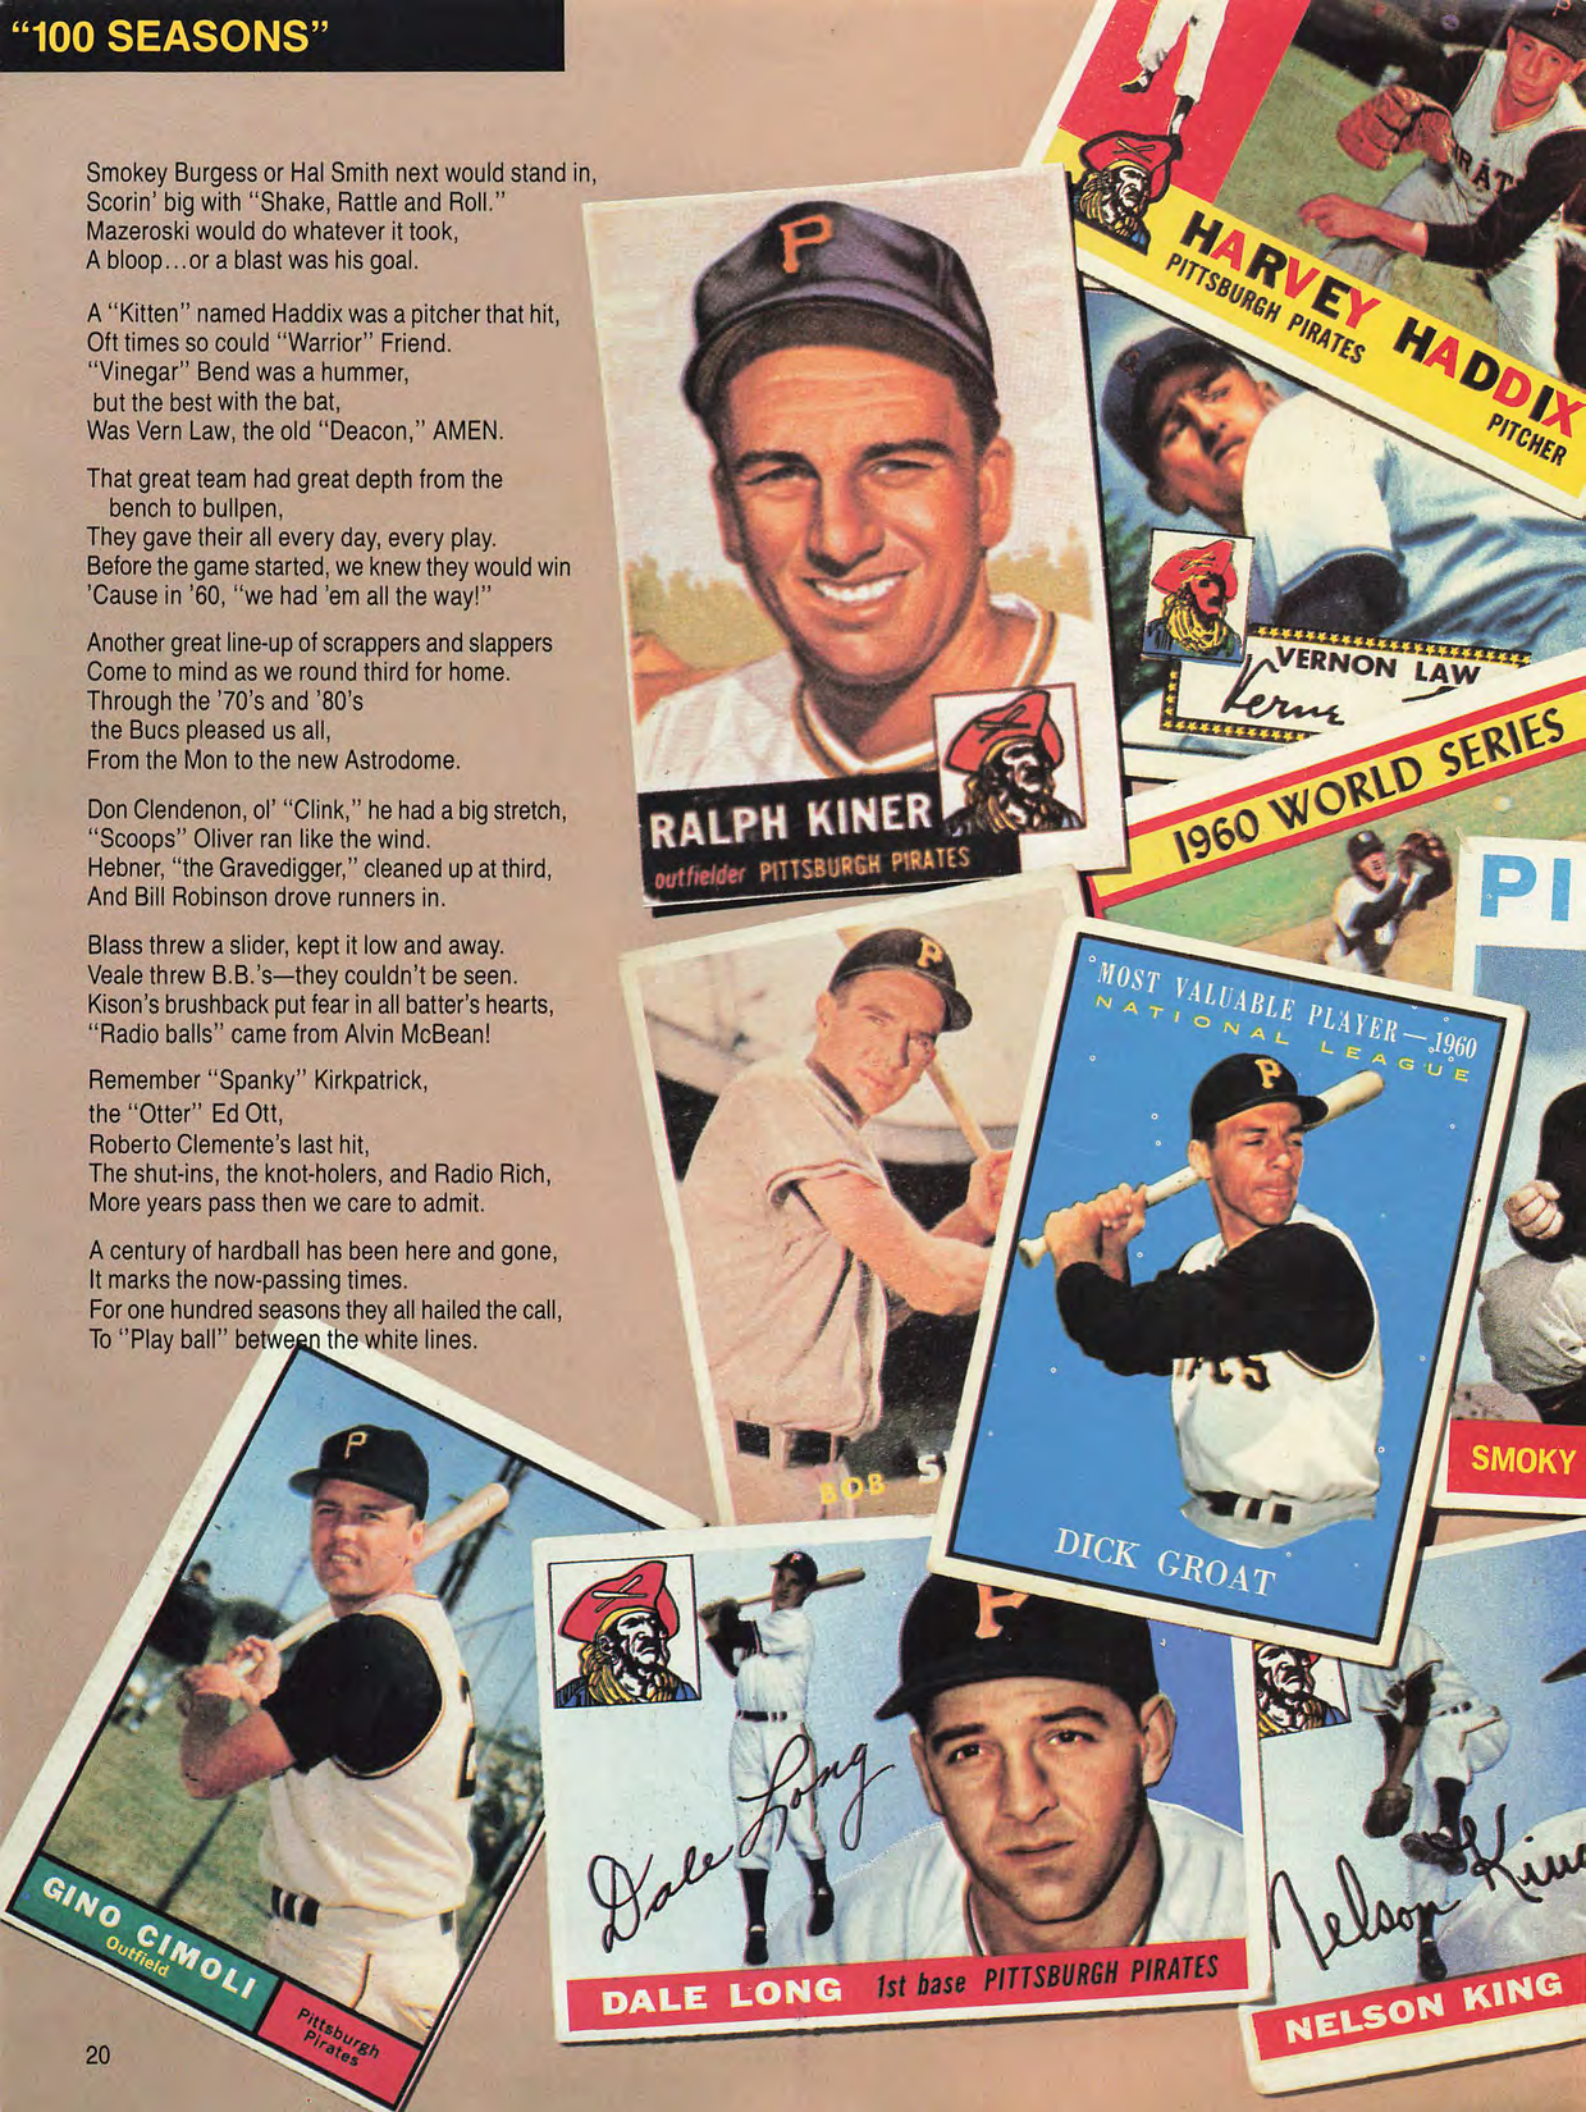
Another great line-up of scrappers and slappers
Come to mind as we round third for home.
Through the '70's and '80's
the Bucs pleased us all,
From the Mon to the new Astrodome.

Don Clendenon, ol' "Clink," he had a big stretch,
"Scoops" Oliver ran like the wind.
Hebner, "the Gravedigger," cleaned up at third,
And Bill Robinson drove runners in.

Blass threw a slider, kept it low and away.
Veale threw B.B.'s—they couldn't be seen.
Kison's brushback put fear in all batter's hearts,
"Radio balls" came from Alvin McBean!

Remember "Spanky" Kirkpatrick,
the "Otter" Ed Ott,
Roberto Clemente's last hit,
The shut-ins, the knot-holers, and Radio Rich,
More years pass then we care to admit.

A century of hardball has been here and gone,
It marks the now-passing times.
For one hundred seasons they all hailed the call,
To "Play ball" between the white lines.



"100 SEASONS"

In Pittsburgh, my friends we have watched them all,
The good, the bad and the great.
From sticky box seats on hot August nights,
To TV games, staying up late.

Thirteen-hundred and forty, all in all,
From this land and from lands far away.
Have come to leave their mark on those
Who love to watch them play.

The great ones will be immortalized
In bronze for all to see.
The rest will be enshrined as well,
In the minds of you and me.

"The Flying Dutchman," Clemente, the Waners, and Kiner,
"Pops" Stargell, Bob Friend,
Freddy Clarke.
They all took the field and they all played their game—
Each one of them could fill a park.

As the decades go by, all of their legends grow,
All becoming much larger than life.
Each filling that place nestled
inside our hearts,
Relieving those moments of strife.

The rest were a breed of men
we could touch.
Hoak, Alou, Elroy Face and Dick Groat.
As they took the field, they took us along.
We watched with our hearts in our throats.

They ran hard, and slid hard, they came from behind,
The true fan harbored nary a doubt,
Because in Pittsburgh baseball was played by a team,
That never quit 'til the last out.

BILL MAZEROSKI

by Mark Madden

"I've said publicly over and over that Maz was the greatest second baseman in the history of the game of baseball. No one before or since has played the position like him."

—Dick Groat
—former Pirate shortstop

"In the era I played, Bill was the best. No one ever made the double play better and as far as fielding the ball, he was as good as I've ever seen. He had good hands, but his feet were the secret."

—Gene Alley
—former Pirate shortstop

Although Groat and Alley may be prejudiced, few baseball people would argue that former Pirate Bill Mazeroski was one of the best second basemen ever to play the game. Groat and Maz formed one of the major league's best double play combinations from 1956-1962 and Alley and Maz did the same from 1965-1970.

Groat and Alley are just two of the countless people who sing the praises of Mazeroski. Consider the following testimony:

• Bill James, author of the "Bill James Historical Baseball Abstract": "Bill Mazeroski's defensive statistics are probably the most impressive of any player at any position. Many of his assists stemmed from his wondrous pivot on the double play, the like of which no one living has ever seen."

• Pete Rose of the Cincinnati Reds on the best double play combination he ever saw: "Bill Mazeroski. It didn't matter who he played with, he was just the best. He had these legs like tree stumps. You slid into him and it was like sliding into a wall."

When Bill Mazeroski played, defense was the name of the game and he was one of the very best at it. Those who watched him perform his baseball ballet at Forbes Field are glad he concentrated on his defense.

• Joe Nuxhall, former Reds pitcher turned broadcaster, discussing Maz on the double play pivot: "I never thought he caught the ball. He got rid of it so quick it was like an optical illusion."

Although it was with the glove that Mazeroski truly sparkled, it wasn't like he didn't know which end of the bat to use. Maz spent his entire 17-year big league career with the Pirates and batted a respectable .260 with 138 home runs. As everyone knows, he played a part in one of baseball's most dramatic moments ever, hitting a ninth inning home run to beat the New York Yankees in the seventh game of the 1960 World Series. Some people, including Maz himself, think the famous home run has obscured his fielding accomplishments.

"I don't think anyone would remember me if it wasn't for the home run," Mazeroski said. "No one cares about fielding. People who know baseball tell me, 'It's too bad people just remember you for the home run because we remember the way you turned the double play.' But the majority of the people just remember the home run."

Mazeroski's defensive wizardry earned him eight Gold Glove awards, more than any other Pirate except Roberto Clemente who won 12. Maz had a superb .983 lifetime fielding average and he still holds National League records for the most year leading the league in assists (nine) and chances (eight).

If Maz had a specialty, it was undoubtedly turning the double play. Throws seemed to bounce off him to the first baseman, earning him the nickname of "No Touch." Maz is the majors' career leader in double plays by a second baseman with 1,706 and he set a major league record for his position by turning 161 double plays in 1966. As a team, the Pirates turned a National League record 215 twin-killings that year.

"I never knew how I did it myself until I saw some slow motion films," Mazeroski said of his defensive prowess. "It turns out I cheated by about a foot, but I didn't realize it until I saw it on film. The big thing in turning the double play is positioning your feet. You can't throw until your feet are ready. Your feet have got to be ahead of your hands."

Today Maz is 50, retired and living with his family in Greensburg, PA. His business interests include a golf course and restaurant in Rayland, OH and he also enjoys fishing and golfing. Maz feels the game has become offense-oriented since his playing days. He feels he could have been a better hitter had he concentrated more on it.

"In the old days, players would rather save a run than get a hit," Mazeroski said. "Now they would rather get the hit because that's what they pay money for. I had the fundamentals down in hitting, but I didn't concentrate on it like I did my fielding. I wasn't an out. I could hit. I still think you have to have defense. Defense wins games in all sports."

PIRATES SLUGGERS

Since 1900 more than 1000 players have worn the uniform of the Pittsburgh Pirates. Although the team has had its share of feared sluggers over the years, only three Pirates have ever led the National League in home runs.

One of them was third baseman Tommy Leach who led the circuit with just six round-trippers in 1902. He beat out Cincinnati's Jake Beckley, a former Pirate, who had five. Leach's six homers and 85 RBI did however help Pittsburgh to an incredible 103-36 record and its second consecutive N.L. pennant.

The two Pirates who led the National League in home runs in modern times were Ralph Kiner and Willie Stargell. Both struck fear in the hearts of pitchers around the league and both have their place among the greatest sluggers in the history of the game. Not coincidentally, Stargell and Kiner sit atop the Pirates' all-time home run list. Stargell, who played 21 seasons in Pittsburgh (1962-1982) is the club's all-time home run king with 475. Kiner is second on the list with 301, a number he collected in just seven-plus seasons with the Pirates.

Kiner signed with Pittsburgh for an $8,000 bonus in 1940. After spending two years in the minor leagues and three years in the United States Navy, Kiner found himself in a Pirates' uniform for the first time in 1946. He started in left field that season and although he hit just .247, 23 of his 124 hits were home runs. Kiner's 23 home runs tied a Pirate single season record previously held by Johnny Rizzo, who achieved that total as a rookie in 1938. Kiner also led the N.L. in home runs that first season, edging New York's Johnny Mize who belted 22.

The 1946 season was the first of seven consecutive seasons in which Kiner either won the N.L. home run title outright or tied for the league lead. In 1947, both he and Mize blasted 51 home runs to share the title although Mize won the RBI crown by a 138-127 margin. The righthanded-hitting Kiner had two or more home runs in a game 10 times in 1947. He also had eight home runs in one week that year. The presence of this exciting new power-hitting star certainly had something to do with the fact that Pittsburgh drew more than one million fans for the first time in the club's history in 1947. Paid attendance in 1947 reached 1,283,531 after the Pirates drew just 749,962 the previous season. It was the first of four straight one million-plus seasons during the Kiner era.

Mize and Kiner tied for the home run crown again in 1948 with both men hitting 40. In 1949, Kiner put together perhaps the finest season of his career when he belted 54 homers to easily outdistance Stan Musial of St. Louis who had 36. In addition, Kiner also led the league in RBI (127) and slugging percentage (.658). His total of 54 homers is still a Pirate single season record and four of those 54 round-trippers were grand slams. An incredible month of September saw the 6-2, 195-pound Kiner clobber 16 home runs to reach the magical total. Despite Kiner's awesome display of firepower, Pittsburgh ended up in sixth place in 1949 with a 71-83 record, 26 games behind the pennant-winning Brooklyn Dodgers.

In 1950, Kiner compiled a total of 47 home runs to win the title over Chicago's Andy Pafko who had 36. The following season of 1951, Kiner's 42 homers were good enough to earn him his sixth crown over Brooklyn's Gil Hodges (40). Kiner's seventh and final title was one he shared in 1952 with Chicago's Hank Sauer as each man had 37.

Kiner's reign was over in 1953 when his 35 home runs were only good enough for fifth place behind Milwaukee's Eddie Matthews (47), Brooklyn's Duke Snider (42) and Roy Campanella (41) and Cincinnati's Ted Kluszewski (40). It was also in 1953 that Kiner's association with the Pirates came to an end. On June 4, 1953, Kiner was the key player in a deal between Pittsburgh and the Chicago Cubs, involving a total of 10 players. He played for the Cubs the remainder of the 1953 season and the entire 1954 season before being dealt to the Cleveland Indians where he finished out his career in 1955. A back ailment ended Kiner's career prematurely.

His 10-year major league home run total was 369. Kiner averaged 7.1 home runs per 100 at bats over the course of his career. In the history of the game, only Babe Ruth had a better percentage with 8.5 homers per 100 at bats.

The 1963 season was Stargell's rookie season with the Pirates, a year in which he batted .243 with 11 home runs and 47 RBI. The lefthanded-hitting outfielder split time in left field with Jerry Lynch, along side centerfielder Bill Virdon and rightfielder Roberto Clemente. Stargell's long ball production increased as he gained more experience against major league pitching. His home run total rose to 21 in 1964, 27 in 1965 and 33 in 1966.

Stargell, whose 475 career homers tie him with Musial for 16th place on baseball's all-time list, led the N.L. in home runs in 1971 and 1973. He helped spark the Pirates' way to a World Championship in 1971 by belting 48 home runs. Despite the impressive figure, he beat out Aaron (47) for the title by just one. Stargell got off to an excellent start that season by hitting 11 home runs in the month of April. He racked Atlanta Braves' pitching for 11 homers that year and his 1971 total of 48 is still a Pirate single season record for lefthanders.

In 1973, Stargell connected for 44 home runs, but again won the home run crown by just one. Second baseman Dave Johnson, the current Mets' manager, hit 43 for Atlanta that season. His previous career-high was 18 with the Baltimore Orioles in 1971. The Braves also got 40-home run years from Darrell Evans (41) and Aaron (40) that year as they led the N.L. with 206.

Like Kiner, many of Stargell's home runs were of the breath-taking variety. People in Montreal still talk about the ball he hit into the pool beyond the right field wall at old Jarry Park. Of the 18 balls that were hit either onto or over the roof of the right field stands at Forbes Field, seven of them were parked there by Stargell. It seemed appropriate that it was Stargell who hit the first Pirate home run at Three Rivers Stadium the night the facility opened (July 16, 1970). Since then six baseballs have been hit into the upper deck at the North Side ballpark and Stargell was responsible for putting four of them there.

Stargell's finest hour came in 1979 when at age 39, he was the driving force behind another World Championship for Pittsburgh. He belted 33 homers, drove in 82 runs and batted .281 during the regular season. In a three-game sweep of Cincinnati in the N.L. playoffs, Stargell batted .455 with two doubles, two homers and six RBI. The man they called "Pops" continued his dominance against Baltimore in the World Series, batting .400 with four doubles, three homers and seven RBI. His two-run homer in the sixth inning of the seventh and deciding game put the Bucs well on their way to a 4-1 victory and it cemented Stargell's lock on the Series MVP award.

Over the years, other Pirate players such as Dick Stuart, Donn Clendenon, Bob Robertson, Frank Thomas, Vince DiMaggio, Roberto Clemente, Dale Long, Rocky Nelson, Richie Hebner, Al Oliver, Dave Parker and Bill Robinson have sent home runs flying out of ballparks around the National League. However, none of them did it with the regularity or with quite the fanfare that Kiner and Stargell exhibited. Kiner had a .567 career slugging percentage with the Pirates which is a club record. Stargell's .532 career slugging percentage is a Pirate record for lefthanders. Both Kiner and Stargell belted 11 grand slams in a Pirate uniform and each hit three homers in one game on four different occasions for Pittsburgh. Both will be remembered and talked about for a long, long time.

ROBERTO CLEMENTE

by John Mehno

Finishing last in the National League in 1954 was one of the best things that ever happened to the Pittsburgh Pirates. A 53-101 record put the Pirates 11 games behind the seventh-place Chicago Cubs and assured them of first choice in the minor league draft.

The Dodgers knew they only had a minimal chance of making the charade work. Other teams had been aware of Clemente as an amateur in Puerto Rico. Besides that, everyone was smart enough to keep an eye on the always-productive Dodger farm system.

"I couldn't take my eyes off him," said Clyde Sukeforth, the Pirate scout assigned

On November 22, 1954, that option and $4,000 brought Roberto Clemente to Pittsburgh from the roster of the International League's Montreal Royals. It was barely a ripple in the day's sports news but after 3,000 hits, 12 Gold Gloves, three divisional titles and two World Championships, who can dispute the importance of that transaction in the Pirates' first 100 years?

The Pirates were not alone in projecting Clemente's brilliance. In fact, though, everyone in baseball knew the talent-rich Brooklyn Dodgers were trying to hide Clemente on their Triple—A roster. Clemente was signed by Brooklyn in 1953 for a $10,000 bonus. A starting outfield of Jackie Robinson, Duke Snider and Carl Furillo, plus an unwritten racial quota, kept Clemente in Montreal. Any team that signed a player for more than $4,000 was obligated to either keep the player in the major league or risk losing him in the minor league draft.

The alternative was for the Dodgers to try and hide Clemente. His talent made that impossible, despite the Dodgers' laughable efforts. He was once lifted for a pinch hitter with the bases loaded in the first inning. He hit two triples in one game and then found himself benched the following night.

Clemente, just 18 and struggling with a dual language barrier in Quebec, was baffled and the Dodgers chose not to explain the situation to him. Clemente finally approached Al Campanis, the Dodger executive who signed him.

"I want to go home," Clemente said. "I know I can play better than these guys but I'm not being used."

"Do you trust me?" Campanis said. Clemente said yes. "Then believe me, everything will be all right."

to observe Montreal. With that statement, Sukeforth echoed the words Campanis uttered at a tryout camp in Puerto Rico a year earlier.

Sukeforth had dinner with Montreal manager Max Macon and made no secret of his mission.

"You might as well play him," Sukeforth said. "He's better than anyone we have now. We are going to finish last and we are going to draft him number one."

Even though Clemente sat out Montreal's final 25 games, the Pirates chose him at the major league meeting in New York. It wasn't a difficult decision.

In Pittsburgh the outfield competition was less formidable and Clemente quickly worked his way into the starting lineup. He got his first major league hit, an infield single against Brooklyn's Johnny Podres. His last regular season hit was his 3,000th, a double to the gap in left-center against Jon Matlack of the New York Mets on September 30, 1972. In between, Clemente had a Hall of Fame career memorable for both substance and style.

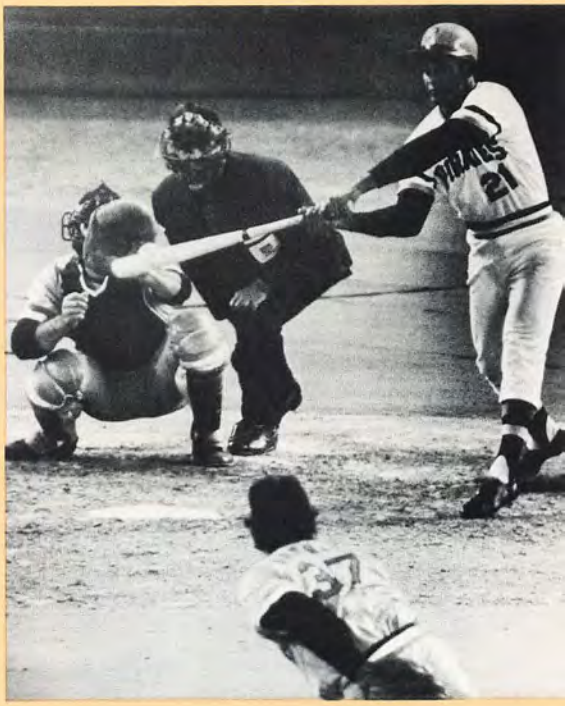
There was intensity in his eyes as he concentrated on a pitch. There was the unorthodox grace of the corkscrew batting stance as he uncoiled and lashed line drives. There was the calculated nonchalance basket catch and the underhanded flip of the ball back to the infield when no runners were on base.

There was the chiseled physique, 5-11, 180 pounds. Despite the well-chronicled aches and pains, it was perhaps the perfect baseball player's body, driven by an uncommon inner fury. There was a .317 career batting average, four batting titles, 14 All-Star games, the 1966 MVP award and a prominent place in virtually every Pirate offensive category.

There was also attributes not reliably measured by statistics—like the power of Clemente's throwing arm. Records of outfield assists don't reflect how his reputation kept a runner from even daring an extra base. But ask someone who was there the time Clemente threw out St. Louis runners at the plate in consecutive innings or the times he'd throw behind a runner making a wide turn at first base.

He was the prototype complete player, something the nation came to know when he made the 1971 World Series his personal showcase. He used those seven games to catch up on whatever recognition eluded him for the first 17 years of his career. Fiercely proud of his heritage, he used the forum his Series fame brought him to improve the image of Latin American players.

Clemente's social conscience put him aboard a small plane overloaded with relief supplies for earthquake-ravaged Nicaragua on New Year's Eve 1972. The plane went down in the Atlantic Ocean shortly after takeoff. Pittsburgh and Puerto Rico began a new year mourning a hero.



The Hall of Fame voting was conducted with unprecedented swiftness and the cruel reality of his absence was confronted by his family, teammates and fans. Baseball has developed stars since but few, if any, have come close to merging excellence with elegance as Clemente did.

In an interview conducted shortly after the 1972 season ended, Clemente said, "I am convinced that God wanted me to be a baseball player. I was born to play baseball."

Anyone who ever saw Roberto Clemente in action would surely agree.

KISS IT GOODBYE!

Most discussions of Pirate broadcasters usually begin and end with one man—Bob Prince. "The Gunner," as he was known, described Pirate action longer than anyone, spending 28 years behind the microphone (1948-1975). Along the way he developed a following of Pirate fans who thoroughly enjoyed his openly partisan, sometimes controversial and always entertaining style.

Prince gave fans a steady diet of sayings they came to know off by heart. A "bug on the rug" was a ball hit to one of the outfield gaps on the artificial turf. Following every Pirate victory, he would proclaim, "We had

Rosey Rosewell and "Aunt Minnie"

'em all the way," no matter how hotly contested the game may have been. When a reliever would enter a game in a pressure-packed situation, Prince would immediately call for the "Hoover" or the "vacuum"—alias the double play ball. And of course, "Kiss it Goodbye," was his famous home run call.

Prince burst upon the Pirate broadcasting scene in 1948 when he joined another Pittsburgh favorite, Rosey Rowswell. That duo stayed together until Rowswell died following the 1954 season. Over the years, Prince also shared the booth chronologically with Dick Bingham, Joe Tucker, Claude Haring, Paul Long, Jim Woods, Don Hoak, Gene Osborne and Nellie King. Woods, who was known as "The Possum," worked with Prince for 12 years (1958-1969) and King, a former pitcher with the Pirates, teamed up with Prince for nine years (1967-1975).

It was Rowswell who became the Pirates' first full-time announcer back in 1936. After working alone for several seasons, he got his first broadcast partner in the person of Jack Craddock in the early 1940's. Rowswell, who called Pirate play-by-play for 19 years (1936-1954), had a down home, folksy style that also made him a fan favorite. He regularly referred to the Pirates as "my Bucs" and his home run call was one of the more entertaining in the business. When a Pirate player would launch a drive high and long toward the outfield seats, Rosewell would plead—"Open the window Aunt Minnie, here she comes." However, his beloved imaginary character never got there in time as witnessed by the listening audience which heard Rowswell recreate the sound of shattering glass.

Pirate baseball can be heard on flagship station KDKA (1020 AM) in Pittsburgh, making 1987 the 33rd consecutive season the two have been affiliated. KDKA Radio has originated Pirate broadcasts every year since 1955. However, the Pirates' relationship with KDKA goes back even farther than that. In fact, from a historical perspective, it was KDKA which did the first live broadcast of a baseball game when Harold Arlin was behind the microphone on August 5, 1921 for a game between the Pirates and Philadelphia from Forbes Field. It was a few years later before fans were kept up to date on what was happening during Pirate road games. In 1927, Pittsburgh Gazette-Times writer Chilly Doyle reported the happenings of games via telephone. The information and situations were then recreated by the paper's sports editor Chet Smith over the air waves in Pittsburgh.

Pirate baseball broadcasts have indeed come a long way over the years. Lanny Frattare and Jim Rooker, the club's current broadcast team, does not have to cope with such hardships. The Pirates Radio Network has expanded to some 30 stations serving fans in Pennsylvania, Ohio, Maryland and West Virginia.

Frattare is now in his 12th season as a member of the Pirate announcing team. Only Prince, Rowswell and Woods have described Pirate baseball longer. Frattare's association with the Pirates began in 1974 when he served as broadcaster for the Charleston Charlies, the Pirates' AAA International League affiliate. He worked there for two years before he and Milo Hamilton replaced Prince and King. Frattare, who began his baseball broadcasting career in 1968 with the Geneva Senators of the Class A New York-Penn League, also worked with Dave Martin before joining forces with Rooker in 1981.

Rooker, a former lefthanded pitcher who won 103 games in the major leagues, was a member of the Pirates' 1979 World Championship club. He retired as an active player following an injury-riddled 1980 season. The 1987 season will be Rooker's seventh as color commentator for Frattare, the current "Voice of the Pirates."

FORBES FIELD FEATURE

by John Mehno

Forbes Field opened on June 30, 1909 and to say the reviews were positive would be an understatement. Consider this endorsement in the 1910 Reach Baseball Guide:

"For architectural beauty, imposing size, solid construction and public comfort and convenience, it has not its superior in the world."

Not every description was that glowing however. Through the years, there were those who criticized Forbes Field because of such things as girder-obstructed views, uncomfortable seats and limited parking facilities. Still, most of the criticism seems odd considering the retroactive worship Forbes Field commands among some baseball fans today. Indeed, Forbes Field had its strong points. It offered real grass, cheap bleacher seats and—don't ask how—but it even smelled like a ballpark.

The place the Pirates called home the longest had humble beginnings. With Andrew Carnegie's help, owner Barney Dreyfuss bought the property from Schenley Farms in the winter of 1908-09. Incredibly it took only four months for the Nicholas Building Company to construct Forbes Field. The cost was $2 million, compared to $55 million for Three Rivers Stadium.

The Pirates dropped the opener to the Cubs, 3-2, before an overflow crowd of 30,338. The club would go on to play about 4,700 baseball games at Forbes Field before approximately 41 million fans. At various times, it was also the home field for the Steelers, Pitt, Duquesne, Carnegie Tech and a one-year soccer team appropriately called the Phantoms. Forbes Field was also the site of basketball games, ice shows, track meets, wrestling shows, circuses and religious rallies. Jersey Joe Walcott knocked out Ezzard Charles to win the heavyweight championship there in June of 1951.

But it was, after all, a baseball park and Forbes Field had its memorable moments. There were two all-star games (1944 and '59), four World Series (1909, '25, '27, and '60), unassisted triple plays for and against the Pirates (Glenn Wright and Cubs' James Cooney respectively) and several historic home runs.

Babe Ruth was a member of the Boston Braves when he hit the final three home runs of his career at Forbes Field on May 25, 1935. The last, off Guy Bush, was the first ever to clear the right field roof. Ruth touched home plate, exited through the Pirate dugout to the clubhouse and ended his playing career.

Dale Long made major league history when he homered for the eighth time in as many consecutive games against Brooklyn's Carl Erskine on May 28, 1956. The biggest crowd in two years (32,000) brought Long out of the dugout for two curtain calls, a rare tribute in those days.

Even though every one claims to have been there, official attendance was 36,683 on October 12, 1960 when Bill Mazeroski became the first and only player ever to end a World Series with a home run.

The irony is that pitchers must have surely had significant input when the plans for Forbes Field were drawn. Center field was 457 feet away and only one player, Dick Stuart, ever cleared that wall. It was so deep that the batting cage was stored in center field during games. The distance to left field was 365 feet and a cozy 300-foot right field fence included a 33-foot high screen to minimize cheap home runs.

Playing nine full seasons at Forbes Field undoubtedly cost Willie Stargell a chance to hit 500 home runs. Stargell, the Pirates' all-time home run leader, ended his career with 475 and can only imagine how many more were claimed by the expanses of his home park.

The distances to the fence did, however, create gaps that prevented any pitcher from getting a no-hitter. Bob Moose came within four outs on June 14, 1968, but lost it when journeyman Julio Gotay blooped a single to right field. Moose wound up with a two-hit shutout.

Moose's gem was worth the price of admission but the greatest bargain may have been an October 2, 1920 tripleheader against Cincinnati. The league ordered that three games be played that day because third place was at stake. For the record, the Reds won twice and the three games were completed in five hours.

Five years later, Kiki Cuyler hit a bases loaded double in the eighth inning to give the Pirates a 9-7 win over the Washington Senators in the deciding game of the World Series before a crowd of 42,856 at Forbes Field. The Pirates, who lost three of the first four games, completed an impressive comeback with 15 hits off Walter Johnson.

Two years later, Ruth and the rest of the legendary 1927 Yankees started a four-game World Series sweep of the Pirates with two victories at Forbes Field.

While the cast of characters changed over the years, there were also modifications in the physical appearance of Forbes Field. The scoreboard eventually evolved into a three-story, manually-operated structure in left field. Sam Marini worked in the scoreboard room from 1948 until the park closed, often enduring stifling 100-degree conditions on summer afternoons.

Marini and his crew posted inning-by-inning scores of every game in the major leagues and enjoyed a unique vantage point. They also got to know most of the players from batting practices challenges. Marini would make friendly bets with players to throw a baseball through a specific opening in the board. His experience told him which ones were easy and which were impossible, but still that couldn't save him from Bob Uecker. Uecker accepted the challenge and won, firing a ball through the designated slot. The ball ricocheted wildly inside the scoreboard, leaving Marini with a black eye, but a lasting friendship with Uecker.

For those watching from more conventional seats, double-deck stands were added in right field in 1925, trimming 76 feet off the distance from home plate. An enclosure was built in left field in 1947, reducing the home run distance by 30 feet. Since the idea was to improve Hank Greenberg's home run chances, the pen was named "Greenberg Gardens." Greenberg retired that season but the enclosure stayed and became Ralph Kiner's corner. When Kiner was traded to the Cubs in 1953, the enclosure came down and there was no further tampering with the fences.

Talk of a new stadium in Pittsburgh began in the late 1950's and the Pirates sold Forbes Field to the University of Pittsburgh for $2 million on November 28, 1958. A five-year lease was negotiated, after which it was hoped the Pirates would move to their new home on the North Side. After several false starts, Three Rivers Stadium was finally under construction and Forbes Field eventually fell into a state of disrepair.

The park finally closed with a doubleheader against the Cubs on June 28, 1970. The Pirates, en route to a National League East title, swept both games before a crowd of 40,918, the largest since 1956. Al Oliver hit the last home run at Forbes Field, Dave Giusti threw the last pitch and Mazeroski recorded the last putout, stepping on second base to force Willie Smith on a ball hit by Don Kessinger.

At the conclusion of that doubleheader, Forbes Field was pillaged by souvenir hunters who ripped out the seats and scaled the scoreboard to steal numbers. Eventually, Forbes Field was demolished and replaced by the Forbes Quadrangle, part of Pitt's law school complex.

The old park survives in bits and pieces. A scarred home plate is under glass in one of the law school buildings and a portion of the centerfield wall and flagpole still stand intact. A street now runs through left-center but the outline of the wall is preserved in the sidewalk and a plaque marks the spot where Mazeroski's 1960 home run cleared.

Q&A WITH PIRATE GENERAL MANAGER SYD THRIFT

What were you most pleased with and what were the Pirates' biggest improvements in 1986?

Answer: I was most pleased with the offensive production, particularly the stolen bases and the overall baserunning. We improved a lot overall in team make-up. Guys like Bream, Belliard, Bonds, Diaz, Reynolds and Bonilla were playing full-time at the major league level for the first time in their careers. That along with a significant number of young pitchers meant the majority of our lineup was in its first year. Despite all that, the quality of talent improved on the Pirates as the year progressed and we were very competitive most of the season. We won seven more games than we did in 1985 which was not as many as we would have liked, but it was certainly a step in the right direction.

What area of the team needs the most improvement in 1987?

Answer: Pitching, and by that I mean the starters and the bullpen. We need to have a transformation from throwing to pitching and I think our new pitching coach, Ray Miller will be a big help reaching that goal. He has studied the art of pitching for many years and his knowledge and experience should benefit our young staff a great deal. I think the starters will improve automatically as the bullpen does.

What are your goals for the Pirates in 1987?

Answer: Number one, is to execute to perfection the basic fundamentals like bunting, base-running, cutoffs, and relays. Number two, is to play smarter "Hardball." Still be aggressive, but play smarter. And number three, is to recognize opportunities and take advantage of them in game situations. Like when we have runners on second and third and no out and a ground ball scores a run. In that situation, we shouldn't be swinging from our heels. We have to spend more time on talking, thinking, believing and if we do all that it will lead to more winning.

You installed several new ideas and approaches in 1986, what are some of the new things you plan to add into the Pirates' attack this year?

Answer: There are a couple things really. One would be the two-strike approach in hitting where you shorten up on the bat, shorten your swing, move closer to the plate and just try to make contact. I would also like us to execute the slug bunt or as I call it the "butcher-boy" play where you shortened up on the bat, square around and then chop the ball into the ground.

What in your opinion are the most crucial elements to a successful organization?

Answer: Good judgement in all areas, especially with your ballplayers. Certainly good judgement is important in the evaluation process of players; selecting the best players and implementing instruction so those players can develop to their full potential. Successful organizations also have a total commitment to excellence, with everyone taking pride in their work and approaching it as being more than just a job. And also everyone has to support each other in their respective roles.

You've said 1989 is going to be the Pirates' key year. Why?

Answer: Because that's the amount of time it is going to take for our present players to reach their maximum potential and it is also the amount of time it will take for recently drafted players to arrive on the big league scene.

What are some of baseball's biggest challenges?

Answer: To continue to show improvement in the area of talent so that people continue to fill the stadiums. And so that radio and TV audiences will continue to grow. The American people want to see the best. Baseball is a game that requires the most individual skill of any team sport and this fact needs to be continuously brought to light. We, in baseball, need to depict the skills needed to be executed. We need the public to be instructed and to educate the fans.

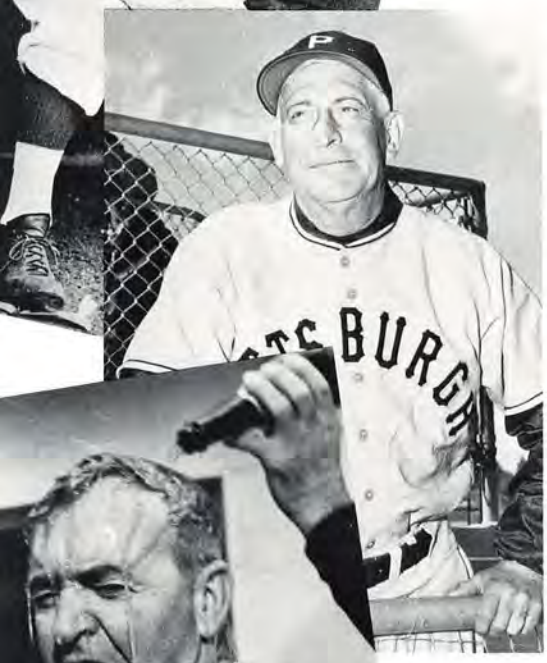
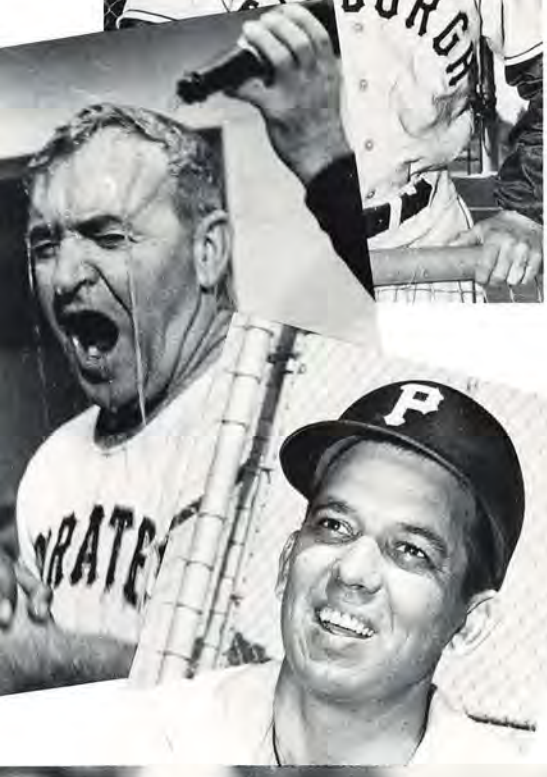
(R) Rookies (11)





JIM LEYLAND

James Richard Leyland, 42, is in his second season as manager of the Pittsburgh Pirates. When Leyland was named to the post on November 20, 1985, he brought 22 years of professional baseball experience with him to Pittsburgh. He spent 11 of those years as a manager in the Detroit Tigers' farm system. During his four years as third base coach of the Chicago White Sox (1982-1985), he was considered an outstanding major league managerial candidate. Although his first team lost 98 games and finished in sixth place, Leyland breathed new life into the Pirates during his rookie season. On the field, the Pirates took on the personality of their fiery, energetic new manager, and played a very competitive brand of baseball. Leyland, a native of Toledo, OH, bought a home in the Pittsburgh area during the off-season. Overall, Leyland feels much more comfortable with his team and with the city of Pittsburgh than he did a year ago. His recollections of 1986 and his hopes for 1987 are reflected in the following comments.

"As I've said before, I hope the Pirates are a team that is a little less exciting and a little more consistent in 1987. I'm not saying I want us to be dull. I still want us to be aggressive, but I would like to manage a little differently. Last year we took a lot of chances and did some things I know you really shouldn't do. We had to earn some respect and show teams around the league that we weren't going to sit there and take a whipping. This year we shouldn't have to gamble as much.

"I'm really pleased with what we have going on. There is no doubt in my mind that we have things moving in the right direction. This city has been very good to us and we want to win for them very badly. We're a better team by far than we were last spring. We're improving, but we know moving up in the standings won't be easy because teams like the Mets and the Phillies are also improving.

"We have some advantages this year that we didn't have a year ago. This year we know Sid Bream is going to be our first baseman, we know Jim Morrison is going to be our third baseman, we know Barry Bonds is our center-fielder. Most positions have been pretty well solidified. As a result, we can concentrate more on the refinement of players' skills. That is going to be a big advantage. Last year we were not able to do as much of that as we would have liked.

"One big item too, is that we've seen with our own eyes what our guys can and cannot do. I know how my guys react in pressure situations. Also they know my personality and what I stand for. Basically, what I stand for is hard work and trying to improve, with the ultimate goal being to win.

"Another goal we have is to coordinate our team as a unit. Getting everyone to do the things you need to win on a consistent basis. We worked on that last year and this year we should show even more improvement in that department. We lost a lot of one-run games last year and I'm sure inexperience was a big factor because we have five or six first-year guys playing all the time. If we could win half of those games this year it would certainly make a big difference.

"Last year we were an exciting ballclub. This year I want us to be a good, exciting ballclub."

45 RICH DONNELLY
Bullpen Coach

Rich Donnelly, 40, is in his second season as the Pirates' bullpen coach. He was the Texas Rangers' first base coach for three years before coming to Pittsburgh. He is a veteran of 19 years in professional baseball who spent a total of 16 years with the Washington/Texas organization. Donnelly, a former catcher, had a four-year professional playing career prior to becoming manager of the Rangers' Greenville (Class A) club in the Western Carolina League in 1972. He guided his teams to postseason play and won the league's manager-of-the-year award in each of his first three seasons. The Steubenville, OH native also managed five years on the Triple-A level for the Rangers.

32 GENE LAMONT
Third Base Coach

Gene Lamont is in his second season as the Pirates' third base coach. The 40-year-old Lamont was the first person named to the Pirate coaching staff after Jim Leyland was appointed manager in November of 1985. Lamont managed in the Kansas City Royals' farm system for eight seasons after retiring as an active player in 1977. He spent the final two seasons of his managerial career with the Royals' Omaha (AAA) club, and 10 players on Kansas City's 1985 World Championship club played for Lamont in the minors. He was a catcher who spent all but three months of his playing career in the Detroit Tigers' oganization. Lamont played the entire 1974 season and parts of four other years with the Tigers.

39 MILT MAY

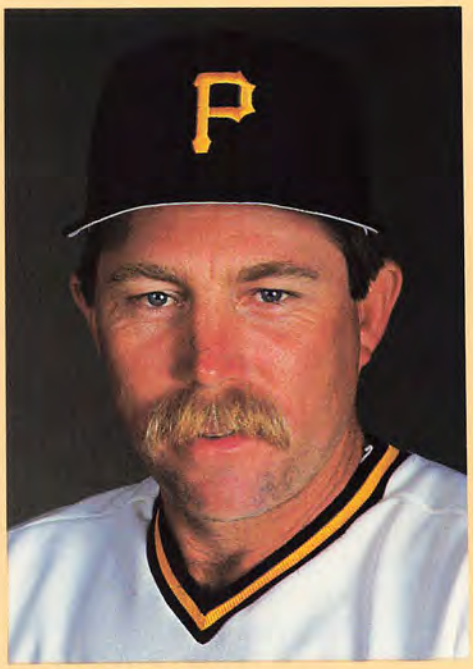
Hitting Instructor

Milt May is in this first year as the Pirates' hitting instructor. The former catcher played 14 full seasons in the major leagues, including three full years with the Pirates. He compiled a .263 lifetime batting average in 1,192 major league games with 77 home runs and 443 runs batted in, before retiring following the 1984 season. May was a rookie on the Pirates' 1971 World Championship club and he delivered a pinch-hit, game-winning single in Game Four of that series versus Baltimore. He also played for Houston, Detroit, the Chicago White Sox and San Francisco during his big league career. Last year, May served as the Pirates' advance scout and as a roving catcher and hitting instructor in Pittsburgh's minor league system. He also managed one of the Pirates' teams in the Florida Instructional League.

31 RAY MILLER

Pitching Coach

The Pirates landed one of the best pitching coaches anywhere in baseball when they hired Ray Miller during the off-season. The 41-year-old Miller, who formerly managed the Minnesota Twins, is best known for his successful stint as a pitching coach of the Baltimore Orioles. In seven and a half seasons (1978-1985) in that role, he coached five different 20-game winners, including two Cy Young Award winners (Mike Flanagan in 1979 and Steve Stone in 1980). Baltimore also appeared in the World Series twice while Miller was pitching coach, losing to the Pirates in 1979 and defeating Philadelphia in 1983. Miller has a reputation for working well with young people and helping them learn how to pitch. Developing the wealth of young arms in the organization is vital to the rebuilding of the Pirates and Miller is being counted on to bring out the best in promising young pitchers such as Mike Bielecki, Bob Kipper, Doug Drabek, Brian Fisher and Bob Patterson.



37 TOMMY SANDT

First Base Coach

Tommy Sandt is in his first season as the Pirates' first base coach. The 35-year-old Sandt is a former major league infielder who played for the Oakland A's. He had been a manager in the Pirates' farm system for five years, including the last three seasons with the Hawaii Islanders (AAA) of the Pacific Coast League. Sandt compiled a .553 winning percentage and a 239-193 record at Hawaii. He was named the PCL Manager-of-the-Year in 1984 after guiding the Islanders to an 87-53 mark and the PCL Championship Series. Sandt managed many of the current Pirates when he was at Hawaii, including Mike Bielecki, Mike Diaz, Barry Bonds, Joe Orsulak and Bob Patterson. Sandt was a player-coach for the Pirates' Portland (AAA) club in 1980 and 1981 before managing at Buffalo and Lynn in 1982 and 1983 respectively. His overall record as a minor league manager was 368-337 and his teams advanced to post-season play three times in five years.

PITCHER

MIKE BIELECKI

Mike Bielecki rebounded from off-season back surgery to earn a spot in the Pirates' starting rotation in training camp last spring. He posted a 6-11 record in 31 appearances (27 starts) in his first full season in the majors. The hard-throwing righthander had perhaps his finest performance of the year at Three Rivers Stadium on June 18th when he gave up just two hits in eight innings against the St. Louis Cardinals in a game the Pirates eventually won, 2-1, in 12 innings. Under the guidance of new pitching coach Ray Miller, Bielecki hopes to regain the form he showed with the Pirates' Hawaii (AAA) club in 1984. That season, he was 19-3 with a 2.97 ERA and was named Minor League Player-of-the-Year by Baseball America Magazine, an award Dwight Gooden received the previous year.

DOUG DRABEK

Doug Drabek was one of three pitchers the Pirates acquired from the New York Yankees in exchange for Rick Rhoden, Cecilio Guante and Pat Clements last November. The University of Houston product is expected to join the Pirates' starting rotation in 1987. Drabek got his feet wet on the major league level last season when he went 7-8 with New York in 27 appearances (21 starts). He began the 1986 season at Columbus (AAA), but was promoted to the big leagues on May 27th and remained with the Yankees the rest of the season. Drabek made people begin to stand up and take notice in 1985 when he went 13-7 with a 2.99 ERA at Albany (AA) and led the Eastern League in innings pitched (192.2) and strikeouts (153).

BRIAN FISHER

Brian Fisher was also acquired from New York last November in the deal that sent Rick Rhoden to the Yankees. Fisher spent five years as a starter in the Atlanta Braves' organization before being dealt to the Yankees following the 1984 season. New York converted him into a reliever and after opening the 1985 season at Columbus (AAA), he found himself in the big league by May 1st. It wasn't long before he established himself as a righthanded stopper and he and lefty Dave Righetti formed quite a one-two punch. Fisher went 4-4 with 14 saves and a 2.38 in 55 appearances out of the New York bullpen that year and fanned 85 batters in 98.1 innings. Although he saved only six ballgames for the Yankees in 62 appearances last season, he compiled a 9-5 record and tied for second on the staff in wins. Fisher should bolster the Pirates' short relief corps in 1987.

BARRY JONES

Barry Jones was recalled from the Pirates' Hawaii (AAA) farm club on July 14th and remained with the club the rest of the season. In 26 appearances out of the Pittsburgh bullpen, the big righthander compiled a 3-4 record with three saves and a 2.89 ERA. Jones recorded his first major league save by hurling three perfect innings at Montreal on July 28th. His first big league win came as the result of a masterful performance at Chicago's Wrigley Field on August 11th. That afternoon, he pitched four scoreless innings and struck out eight Cubs in the completion of a suspended game. Jones yielded just three earned runs in 15 outings for the Bucs between July 25th and September 3rd.

BOB KIPPER

Bob Kipper was the player-to-be-named-later in the August 1985 deal that sent John Candelaria to the California Angels. However, he certainly didn't perform like a throw-in at spring training last year when he earned a spot in the Pirates' rotation as the fifth starter. After getting off to an 0-4 start, the promising young lefty won six of his last 10 decisions to finish with a 6-8 record in 20 appearances (19 starts). Kipper was out of action from June 26th to September 1st as the result of a stiff shoulder. He combined with Bob Walk and Pat Clements to shutout the Dodgers, 4-0, on May 31st and he tossed a four-hitter at St. Louis to defeat the Cardinals, 5-1, on October 2nd in two of his better performances.

BOB PATTERSON

Bob Patterson enjoyed a fine 1986 season at Hawaii (AAA) after being acquired from San Diego in exchange for outfielder Marvell Wynne just before Opening Day. He compiled a 9-6 record and a 2.98 ERA in 21 AAA starts and led the staff in wins. Hawaii was shutout in three of his six losses. Patterson was named to the Pacific Coast League's postseason all-star team after leading the league in strikeouts (137 in 156 innings) and finishing third in ERA (3.40). He made a total of 11 appearances and went 2-3 in two different stints with the Pirates last season.

RICK REUSCHEL

Rick Reuschel was one of the workhorses of the Pirate pitching staff in 1986 as he tied for the club lead in starts (34) and was second in innings pitched (215.2). The veteran righthander had a 9-16 record last season and has now amassed 162 career wins which puts him in 12th place among active major league pitchers. Reuschel also tossed the 19th and 20th shutouts of his career in 1986, blanking the Reds 4-0 in Cincinnati on May 17th and the Cardinals 3-0 at Three Rivers Stadium on August 3rd. "Big Daddy" also displayed fine control by walking just 57 batters all season. Reuschel was named the National League Comeback Player-of-the-Year by The Sporting News in 1985 when he was 14-8 with a sparkling 2.27 ERA for the Pirates.

DON ROBINSON

Don Robinson was very effective as a stopper out of the Pirates' bullpen when he was healthy last season. A knee injury sidelined the big righthander from April 21st until June 7th, but he came back strong to finish with 14 saves in 15 save opportunities. Robby was particularly impressive toward the end of the season, going 1-0 with four saves and an 0.44 ERA in his last 13 outings. After beginning his career with the Pirates as a starter, Robinson now relishes the role of a reliever. The only thing he doesn't like about it is not getting to bat much. Robinson entered the 1987 season with a .267 lifetime batting average, the highest among active pitchers. The Sporting News N.L. Rookie Pitcher-of-the-Year in 1978, Robinson is the only Pirate remaining from the 1979 World Championship club.

BOB WALK

Bob Walk made the Pirate pitching staff last spring after a highly-successful 1985 season at Hawaii (AAA). He was 16-5 for the Islanders as he led the Pacific Coast League in victories, ERA (2.65) and complete games (12). During the 1986 season, Walk showed his versatility by performing well for the Pirates both as a starter and a reliever. He earned a spot in the starting rotation after some effective work as a long reliever early in the season. Walk was 5-5 in 15 starts with his best outing coming in Los Angeles on July 5th when he defeated Orel Hershiser and the Dodgers 5-0 on a four-hitter. Walk, who first appeared in the big leagues with the Philadelphia Phillies in 1980, finished 7-8 overall for the Pirates last season with a 3.78 ERA.

JOHN CANGELOSI

John Cangelosi was acquired by the Pirates from the Chicago White Sox in exchange for pitcher Jim Winn during spring training. Last season was Cangelosi's first year in the big leagues and the speedy 23-year-old outfielder batted .235 for the White Sox in 137 games. He beat out Rudy Law and Daryl Boston for Chicago's starting centerfield job and went on to set an American League rookie record by stealing 50 bases. Cangelosi enjoyed his hottest stretch during July and early August when he hit safely in 25 of 29 games and batted .293. His 13-game hitting streak between June 10-23 tied Carlton Fisk and Boston for the longest by a White Sox player in 1986. Pirate General Manager Syd Thrift called Cangelosi, "an outstanding baserunner whose aggressive nature fits the chemistry of our ballclub very well."

LOGAN EASLEY

Logan Easley was named the New York Yankees' Minor League Pitcher-of-the-Year in 1986 after putting together the best season of his career. After enjoying only moderate success his first five years as a professional, Easley mastered the split-fingered fastball last season at Albany (AA) and the numbers speak for themselves. He was 8-7 with a sparkling 1.51 ERA and his 18 saves set a club record and tied for the league lead. Easley finished 45 of the 49 games he appeared in and he struck out 73 batters in 77.2 innings. At one point, he went 50.2 innings over 31 appearances without allowing an earned run and he was 7-1 with 12 saves during that stretch.

Stan Fansler, one of the most highly-regarded pitching prospects in the Pirates' organization, got his first taste of the big leagues last September when he made five starts for the Bucs. Although he went 0-3, the Pirate brass felt the 22-year-old righthander showed a lot of promise. Prior to having his contract purchased by the Pirates on September 2nd, Fansler compiled an 8-9 record and a 3.63 ERA in 29 appearances (24 starts) with Hawaii (AAA). He was Pittsburgh's third round selection in the June 1983 free agent draft.

John Smiley's career took a definite turn for the better when he was converted to a reliever last season at Prince William (Class A). This flame-throwing southpaw got his velocity back for the first time since suffering a broken hand in 1984. Smiley used that velocity to notch 14 saves and fan 93 batters in 90 innings. His fastball was voted the best in a poll of Carolina League coaches. Pirate General Manager Syd Thrift was so impressed with Smiley that he promoted him from Class A to the big leagues in September. He made 12 appearances out of the Pirate bullpen during the last month of the season and showed promise. Opposing hitters were just 4-for-38 against him (.105) and none of the 10 runners he inherited scored.

MIKE LAVALLIERE

Mike LaValliere was acquired by the Pirates during spring training in the deal that sent Tony Pena to the St. Louis Cardinals. He opened the 1986 season as the Cardinals' backup catcher, but became a regular before the All-Star break. LaValliere saw action behind the plate in 108 games, the most ever by a Cardinal rookie catcher. He showed fine defensive skills, throwing out 26 of 65 runners attempting to steal (.380). In addition, he had only one passed ball which was the fewest by any N.L. catcher who played 60 games or more. LaValliere batted .234 with three home runs and 30 RBI in his first year in the big leagues

JUNIOR ORTIZ

Junior Ortiz completed his second full season as Tony Pena's backup last year. Although playing behind an All-Star is not the easiest role to succeed in, Ortiz has proved to be a fine defensive catcher and no slouch at the plate either, batting .292 and .336 respectively the past two seasons. Ortiz hit safely in each of his last eight starts in 1986 (13-for-29, .448) and he had at least one hit in 21 of the 28 games he started over the course of the season. Now in his second tour of duty with Pittsburgh, Ortiz came up through the Pirate farm system and made his major league debut in 1982.

BILL ALMON

Veteran Bill Almon has shown his versatility in the role of utility man for the Pirates the past two seasons. He received praise from Manager Jim Leyland last year for always being ready to play whenever and wherever he was needed. In 1986, Almon played five different positions (third base, shortstop, first base, left field and right field) and also hit in seven different spots in the batting order. Over the course of his major league career, which began in 1974, he has appeared at every position except pitcher. Almon got some key hits for the Pirates in 1986, including a three-run homer off Goose Gossage to win a game in San Diego and a twelfth-inning inside-the-park home run off Houston's Charlie Kerfeld at Three Rivers Stadium that was also a game-winner.

Rafael Belliard won the Pirates' starting shortstop job just before midseason in 1986 and his performance there was something to cheer about. He played a total of 96 games there (85 starts) and committed only 12 errors while displaying excellent range, soft hands and surprising strength in his throwing arm. Belliard's speed on the basepaths was also an asset to the team as he stole 12 bases in 14 attempts. He batted .233 with 31 RBI and he led the club in sacrifice hits with 11. Belliard had the first three-hit game of his career in a 16-5 triumph over Atlanta at Three Rivers Stadium on August 22nd. Belliard also saw action in 23 games at second base.

Sid Bream spent his first full season in the major leagues in 1986 and proved he belonged by batting a healthy .268 with 16 home runs and 77 RBI. He led the Pirates in doubles (37) and runs scored (73), and tied for the club lead in game-winning RBI with nine. Bream also displayed fine defensive skills, playing an exciting, aggressive brand of first base. The highlight of Bream's season came in a game against the Atlanta Braves at Three Rivers Stadium on August 22nd. That night, he went 5-for-5 with a home run, four runs scored and five RBI. Bream was acquired by the Pirates in the September 1985 deal that sent Bill Madlock to the Los Angeles Dodgers.

Jim Morrison put together the most productive season of his major league career in 1986 after winning the Pirates' starting third base job in spring training. Among National League third baseman only Mike Schmidt, the league's most valuable player, compiled better home run and RBI numbers. Morrison's 23 homers and 88 RBI were career highs and he also led the Pirates in both categories. In addition, he tied Sid Bream for the club lead in game-winning RBI with nine. The highlight of Morrison's season came June 1st at Three Rivers Stadium when he went 3-for-5 with a double, a triple, a grand slam and seven RBI versus the Dodgers. A veteran leader on a young club, Morrison made the most of his opportunity to start in 1986.

JOHNNY RAY

Johnny Ray has been a model of consistency at the plate and in the field in his five full seasons with the Pirates. He got off to a tremendous start in 1986, hitting safely in each of the Pirates' first 13 games. Ray was the National League's Player-of-the-Month in April when he hit .380 and drove in 18 runs in 17 games. Despite being hampered by a nagging hamstring injury much of the season, he still managed to finish in the N.L. Top 10 in batting (.301), hits (174) and doubles (33). In addition, Ray tied a major league record for second basemen by committing just five errors all season. His performance did not go unnoticed by his teammates, who last season voted him the "Players' Player" for his leadership, consistency and hustle.

Barry Bonds burst on to the major league scene last season and quickly made a name for himself by leading National League rookies in home runs (16), RBI (48) and stolen bases (36). Bonds hit his first major league home run in Atlanta on June 4, 1986—a year to the day after the Pirates made him their number one selection in the June 1985 free agent draft. Pirate fans marvelled at the exciting young outfielder's knack for making the difficult catches look easy and they were awed by the power of his stroke. Bonds, the son of former San Francisco Giants' star Bobby Bonds, was a standout at Arizona State for three years before turning professional. He hit 45 home runs in a Sun Devil uniform which makes him second to Bob Horner (56) on the school's all-time home run list.

A former Pirate farmhand, Bonilla was reacquired by Pittsburgh last summer in the July 23rd deal that sent pitcher Jose DeLeon to the White Sox. He showed his versatility by starting at five different positions for the Pirates (first base, third base and all three outfield spots). Bonilla sustained a broken right leg in spring training two years ago and missed most of the 1985 season. He successfully recovered from that injury, showing good speed on the bases and in the outfield last season. The Pirates are looking for increased run production from the powerfully-built Bonilla in 1987.

He enjoyed his best year in four big league seasons in 1986 when he batted .270 with 13 home runs and 61 runs batted in. Van Slyke led St. Louis in homers and tied for the club lead in RBI. Pirate General Manager Syd Thrift called Van Slyke, "a complete player who can run, throw, play defense, hit, and hit with power." The quality of his arm is reflected in the fact that he has piled up 24 outfield assists over the past two seasons. Van Slyke was the Cardinals' first round selection in the June 1979 free agent draft. He has been in the major leagues since June of 1983 when he was called up from Louisville (AAA) to replaced the injured Mike Ramsey.

Mike Diaz forced his way into the hearts of Pirate fans and on to the club's 24-man roster last spring when he batted a blistering .377 and belted three homers in training camp. This powerful righthanded hitter nicknamed "Rambo," rebounded from a slow start to hit .268 with 12 homers and 36 RBI in his first year in the big leagues. Diaz was particularly tough on lefthanders, having tagged big name southpaws such as John Tudor, Fernando Valenzuela, Bob Knepper, Sid Fernandez and Shane Rawley for home runs over the course of the season. Although he made the team as a back-up catcher, Diaz was used primarily at first base and in left field by Manager Jim Leyland.

Joe Orsulak continued his hustling, all-out style of play for the Pirates in 1986. Orsulak, a player who can make things happens on the basepaths, led the club with six triples and was second in stolen bases with 24. He also showed off his arm by piling up 11 outfield assists, the most by a Pirate since Lee Lacy had 15 in 1982. Orsulak batted .249 in 138 games last season and he would like to get his average back up to where it was in 1985 when he led all National League rookies with a .300 mark. In 1986, he did set career highs in games (138), at bats (401), hits (100) and runs scored (60). Orsulak played in all three outfield spots after being used primarily as a centerfielder his rookie year.

R. J. REYNOLDS

R. J. Reynolds got off to a flying start in 1986 when he led off the bottom of the first inning of the Pirates' season opener by blasting a home run off the Mets' Dwight Gooden. Two weeks later (April 19th), he celebrated his 26th birthday by going 3-for-6 with five RBI and his first career grand slam against the Cubs at Wrigley Field. Although an injury ended his season a month early, Reynolds went on to bat .269 with nine home runs and 48 RBI in his first full season with the Pirates. He was one of four Pirates to hit 30 or more doubles as Pittsburgh led the league in that department. Reynolds, who was acquired from Los Angeles in August of 1985, had his best month of the 1986 season in July when he batted .360 with three homers and 13 RBI.

Rocky Bridges

VANCOUVER CANADIANS (AAA)

4601 Ontario St Vancouver, BC V5V 3H4 (604) 872-5232

The Pittsburgh Pirates have their Triple-A club in Vancouver this season after being affiliated with the Hawaii Islanders the past four years. The Canadians, who will be managed by Rocky Bridges, compete in the Pacific Coast League and play their home games at Nat Bailey Stadium. Stu Kehoe is the general manager at Vancouver, a club that previously had been associated with the Milwaukee Brewers. Last season, Hawaii finished fourth in the PCL with a 65-79 overall record. Lefthander Bob Patterson was the club's top winner with a 9-6 mark and he also recorded a league-leading 137 strike-outs in 156 innings. First baseman/outfielder Benny Distefano was the team's top power man with 13 homers and 57 RBI to go along with a .259 batting average.

Dave Trembley

HARRISBURG SENATORS (AA)

P.O. Box 15757 Harrisburg, PA 17105 (717) 255-3117

The Pirates' Eastern League affiliate moved from Nashua (NH) to Harrisburg during the off-season. Professional baseball is returning to Harrisburg for the first time since 1952. The Senators will play their home games in a brand new stadium, Island Park. The club will be run by General Manager Rick Redd and Field Manager Dave Trembley. In 1986, the Pirates' Nashua club finished eighth with a 62-78 record. Righthander Jim Neidlinger had an outstanding season, compiling a 12-7 record and a 2.42 ERA before being promoted to Triple-A late in the season. His efforts earned him the Eastern League's Pitcher-of-the-Year award. Righthander Dorn Taylor, 2-2 with nine saves and a 1.58 ERA, was also among the club's top performers.

Steve Demeter

SALEM BUCCANEERS (Class A)

620 Florida Street Salem, VA 24153 (703) 389-3333

The Pittsburgh Pirates moved their Carolina League farm team from one Virginia city (Prince William) to another (Salem) following the 1986 season. In 1987, the Buccaneers will be managed by former Pirate first base coach Steve Demeter. Salem plays its home games at Municipal Field and Sam Lazzaro is the club's Vice President for Baseball Operations. Prince William finished third in the Carolina League the second half of season with a 35-34 record and the team was 67-72 overall. Pitchers Chris Ritter (14-9), Rob Russell (13-5) and Jose Melendez (13-10) were all big winners and reliever Tim Drummond, 6-4 with 12 saves, had a good year out of the bullpen. First baseman Lance Belen (.293 with 18 homers and 88 RBI), catcher Tom Prince (.253 with 10 homers and 47 RBI), and outfielder Jeff Cook (.301 with 43 stolen bases) were the club's top offensive threats.

Dennis Rogers

MACON PIRATES (Class A)

P.O. Box 5124 Macon, GA 31208
(912) 742-0182

The Pirates' Macon club of the Class A South Atlantic League will be managed by Dennis Rogers this season. Rogers managed Pittsburgh's Nashua farm club last season. Len Monheimer is the general manager of the Macon Pirates, who play their home games at Luther Williams Baseball Park. In 1986, outfielder Tony Chance showed promise as a power-hitter with 17 home runs and 55 RBI for Macon. First baseman Carey Cheek (.278 with three homers and 56 RBI) and second baseman Julio Perez (.292 with 32 stolen bases) also had fine seasons.

Jeff Cox

WATERTOWN PIRATES (Summer A)

19 Paddock Arcade Watertown, NY 13601
(315) 788-3405

Watertown is Pittsburgh's entry in the Class A New York-Penn League. This year the club will be managed by Jeff Cox. The team plays its home games at Alex T. Duffy Fairgrounds Stadium. Dan Overstreet is the club's general manager. Among the exciting players at Watertown last season were outfielder Moises Alou, shortstop Tom Shields, and pitcher Mike Walker. Alou, the son of former major leaguer Felipe Alou, was the Pirates' first round draft pick in the January 1986 free agent draft. Shields is a June 1986 draftee from Notre Dame University and Walker is a righthander who was the Pirates' second round draft pick out of the University of Houston last summer.

Woody Huyke

BRADENTON PIRATES (Rookie)

P.O. Box 1359 Bradenton, FL 33506
(813) 747-3031

Bradenton is Pittsburgh's club in the Gulf Coast Rookie League. Woody Huyke returns as the manager at Bradenton and former Pirate pitcher Bruce Kison has been added to the coaching staff to work with the organization's young arms. The Bradenton Pirates play their games at Pirate City, the club's spring training complex. Each year, the majority of the Pittsburgh Pirates draftees and other signees report to Bradenton before being designated for further assignment.

PITTSBURGH ASSOCIATES

A new chapter in Pirate history unfolded on October 2, 1985 when a group of private and public investors reached an agreement in principle to purchase the club from the Galbreath family and Warner Communications. The group, known as Pittsburgh Associates, is comprised of 13 investors (nine corporations and four individuals) committed to keeping the franchise in Pittsburgh. Their dedication and contributions to Pittsburgh's great baseball tradition received special commendation during the past year. Under the direction of Malcolm M. Prine, President and Chief Executive Officer of the new ownership, the Pirates have made significant progress toward re-establishing themselves in the National League East and in the local community.

The individuals and chief executives who make up Pittsburgh Associates are pictured on this page along with Mayor Richard Caliguiri, who sponsored the equity participation loan from the city to help fund the Pirates partnership and keep the team in Pittsburgh.

OVER 100 YEARS AGO FREDERIC MILLER MADE A CLEAR COMMITMENT.

To Quality. To Purity. To America. And That Tradition Continues...

When Frederic Miller came to America from Germany, he wasn't much different from any other newcomer.

Like millions of others, he saw in America a golden opportunity—to bring his brewing skills to their peak, using the finest resources in the world.

Frederic Miller made the most of what America had to offer. He made the best beer he knew how to make, using the finest grains and hops; the purest water.

And to show America the quality and purity of his beer, he insisted on putting it in clear bottles.

A lot has changed since Frederic Miller's day. But a lot hasn't.

Miller still uses the finest ingredients and brewing skills. It contains no additives or preservatives.

And Miller still comes in the same clear bottles.

For the same clear reasons.

Miller

MADE THE AMERICAN WAY.
